——Acknowledging something due or may be due—If sufficient—Written admission of unsettled accounts—Sufficient.

The word "acknowledgment" is not a word of art, and ought to be construed in its plain literal sense. An endorsement on a money bond stated that accounts made up showed a certain sum and that a usufructuary mortgage was executed for a portion of the sum. It was not clear whether the execution of the usufructuary mortgage was in lieu of the whole amount due to the creditor or whether the debtor still held himself bound to pay the balance of the debt

Held, that in order to extend the period of limitation the creditor must show that the debtor signed an acknowledgment to the effect that there was a balance due to the creditor on the bond after crediting the debtor with what was properly due to him in respect of the execution of the usufructuary mortgage deed, and as the endorsement was ambiguous on this point it could not be held to be an acknowledgment deed. ———Acknowledgment—If a promise to pay—Express promise to pay—If barred debt also revived.

No doubt under the English Law an acknowledgment of a debt implies a promise to pay (even a barred debt). But in India in view of the express provision in S. 19 an acknowledgment, in which there is no express promise implying a new contract to pay, must be made before the several components of the account at various dates are barred by time and in this respect an acknowledgment under S. 19, Limitation Act, differs from a promise to pay a barred debt under Cl. (3), S. 25, Contract Act. Where, however, the acknowledgment is not merely an admission of an existing debt but the words there are such from which a clear promise to pay is made out, such as fixing the date of payment and so on, such an acknowledgment would ———Non-denial of existing debt in a written statement—Intention to represent the debt as subsisting—If can be inferred.

An admission to prevent the running of the time under the Limitation Act need not be in the full sense of the word an admission of the existence of liability at the date of the admission, if the proper inference to be drawn from the admission, which is made is that it was intended to represent the debt as then subsisting. 33 Cal. 1047, particularly at page 1059; 16 M.L.J. 300; 41 M.L.J. 217, Foll.

For the purpose of preventing the running of the statute of limitation it would be quite enough, if there was such a passing over of a certain allegation in silence in a written statement signed by the party making the admission which in law amounted to an admission; because he must be taken to know the law and therefore he would be making an admission at that time; for the purpose of limitation an admission made to some other person is sufficient.

In each case the Court has to consider the circumstances in which the statement was made that there was a debt and see whether it was really intended to convey an impression that that debt was subsisting at the date of the statement or not; and if it can from the circumstances infer that the intention of the person making the statement was to convey the impression that the debt was still subsisting it will be justified in holding that it is an acknowledgment of subsisting liability. Plaintiff sued for return of Rs. 500 deposited with defendant 1 and the father of defendant 2. Plaintiff's suit was dismissed on the ground of limitation. In a suit for partition which was instituted by the mother of defendant 2, as his next friend a written statement was put in by defendant 1, in which he admitted this deposit by the plaintiff. In the partition suit the matter was referred to arbitration and an award was made on 10th September, 1924 by which the liability of defendants 1 and 2 was declared in equal shares with regard to whatever was the deposit made by the plaintiff. That award was accepted by a petition to which both defendant 1 and the mother of defendant 2 were parties,

The 2nd defendant signed the promissory note on the 12th November, 1913 for rupees 1,500 with interest at 6 per cent. Payments were made of rupees 90 on the 2nd February, 1915, rupees 200 on the 11 January, 1916 and rupees 381-12-0 on the 21st April, 1916 On the 6th November, 1916 the 2nd defendant endorsed on the note the 3 payments which had been made on the previous dates added up the total and signed underneath, Held, this is an endorsement by which the promisor recorded that he had paid rupees 671-12-0 against the liability which stood against his name on the promissory note and consequently he admitted his liability to pay the balance, and that as a matter of common law an endorsement on a promissory note by the promisor is an acknowledgment of liability which will start a fresh period of limitation from the date on which it was made, and it makes no difference that such endorsement is below on account showing what has already been paid on the promissory note. 40 Mad. 698, Foll.

In a previous suit the defendant had deposed as a witness "I am the 3rd defendant. I and the 2nd defendant purchased some land from the 1st defendant. For the balance of price due to her, Ex. A was executed."

Held, that this was not an acknowledgment of a liability subsisting at the date when the witness deposed. As the witness did not speak of the price as being still due to the 1st defendant at the time, no implied acknowledgment of liability can be spelt out of the mere statement that the witness on some prior date executed a certain bond. ——Punjab Act (III of 1923), S. 5—Period prescribed in—Applicability.

The period within which a suit could be instituted is the "period prescribed for the suit" within the meaning of S. 19, Lim. Act. Therefore the period of two years within which a suit could be filed under S. 5, Punjab Act III of 1923 is the "period prescribed for the suit" within the meaning of S. 19, Lim. Act.

On 17th May, 1921, A signed a balance in favour of B for an amount due and on 7th June, 1924 he acknowledged his liability under that balance. B instituted a suit for recovery of the amount on 9th March, 1927.

Held, that the suit was within time. Section 5, Punjab Act III of 1923, prevented the suit from being barred by time for two years from the date on which the Act came into force and therefore the right to sue being alive on 7th June, 1924, when the liability was acknowledged, the acknowledgment extended the time by virtue of S. 19, Lim. Act, by three years from its date. A.I.R. 1925 All 68, Rel. on; 12 I.C. 810; 36 Bom. 268; 10 I.C. 910; A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 124 and A.I.R. 1928 Nag. 192, Dist. (Jai Lal, J.). In a suit for redemption the second mortgagee can rely upon an admission made by the first mortgagee in a deed, executed within sixty years next before the suit, in which deed he admitted that the common mortgagor was the owner and that the suit properties were demised to his family on kanom. Held, that there was sufficient acknowledgment. In D's suit A was clearly impleaded by D in the character of a mortgagee under the particular mortgage-deed and this was admitted in writing by B and C. This being so, the requirements of S. 19 were amply satisfied. D's plaint and written statement by B and C could be read as evidence of acknowledgment. Farsdon v. Clogg, 10 M. and W. 572, Rel. on. (Stuart, C.J. and Wazir Hasan, J.). ——Admission of purchase of mortgagee rights—No acknowledgment as to being redeemed.

When a man says that he purchased a certain mortgage right he only means that he purchased certain property which came into possession of the vendor as a mortgagee. All that he admits is that the vendor came into possession of the property on foot of a mortgagee. No question arises in his mind as to whether the mortgagee subsists or has become time-barred. The statement by itself does not signify to the mind of the person making the statement or to anybody else that the maker of the statement thinks or believes that he is liable to be redeemed at the date of making the statement. Such statement therefore is not an acknowledgment within S. 19 as any acknowledgment of the original transaction would not necessarily amount to an acknowledgment that the liability which would follow from the original transaction subsists at the date of the statement. knowledgment. There being a new covenant substituted for the old one the period of limitation even as against the alienee is, to be calculated from the date mentioned in the later mortgage and not from that in the original one. Held, that the very fact of G selling his mortgagee rights was an express acknowledgment of the existence of a subsisting mortgage and of subsisting rights which he was competent to sell and the very fact of defendant purchasing those rights was an acceptance on his behalf of an existing mortgage, a mortgage which was in force as a subsisting mortgage on the date of the sale to him, and therefore he cannot set up any defence inconsistent with mortgagee rights. ——Suit for possession of mortgaged property—Bonds given in lieu of interest—Time extended.

Plaintiffs sued for possession of certain land which had been mortgaged to them and claimed an extended period by reason of the existence of certain acknowledgments by the mortgagor. In these bonds part of the consideration was entered as being the interest due to the plaintiffs on the mortgage in the suit.

Held, that the admission of liability to pay interest under the mortgage in the bonds of 1899 and 1903 amounts to an acknowledgment of liability under the motgage including liability to give possession to the mortgagee. 25 Cal 844; 54 I.C. 985, Foll. (Leslie Jones and Dundas, JJ.). ——Effect of acknowledgment—If dependant on the day when somebody could have brought a suit.

It is quite unworkable and really impossible to suppose that the effect of a payment or the effect of an acknowledgment should depend upon the day on which somebody who never brought a suit at all could have brought it. ——Striking balance—Subsequent acknowledgment before limitation—Time runs from acknowledgment.

On 5th March, 1919, the defendant struck a balance in the plaintiffs' bahi for a certain sum of money. On 29th November, 1923 the defendant sent to the plaintiffs a post-card, duly signed by him, acknowledging liability for the debt due on this balance. The plaintiffs sued on 2nd October, 1925, to recover the sum due on foot of the balance,

Held, that the suit was within time. On 5th March, 1919, when the balance was struck the Punjab Loans Limitation Act of 1904 was in force in which a period of six years was provided for suits of this description. The provisions of S. 19, Limitation Act were clearly made applicable to suits governed by it. ———Prescribed—Meaning—Limitation prescribed by Punjab Loans Act II of 1923.

There is no justification for holding that 'prescribed' in S. 19 of the Limitation Act must be limited to the time mentioned in the schedules to the Act. The period of within which a suit can be instituted is the "period prescribed for the suit" within the meaning of S. 19. Therefore the period of two years within which a suit can be filed under S. 5, Punjab Act of 1923 is the "period prescribed for the suit."

On 17th May, 1921, A signed a balance in favour of B for an amount due and on 7th June, 1924, he acknowledged his liability under that balance. B instituted a suit for recovery of the amount on 9th March, 1927,

Section 5, Punjab Act III of 1923, prevented the suit from being barred by time for two years from the date on which the Act came into force and therefore the right to sue being alive on 7th June, 1924, when the liability was acknowledged, the acknowledgment extended the time by virtue of S. 19, Limitation Act by three years from its date. ———Payment expressly towards interest—Writing not necessary—If not express payment is towards principal—When writing in the hand of the maker is necessary.

Section 20 provides for cases in which a payment towards interest or a payment towards principal may be proved to save limitation. If there has been nothing in the handwriting of the debtor, as required by the proviso, the only way in which the creditor can show, that it is open to him to use the payment to save limitation is by proving that at the time it was made it was avowedly made and accepted as a payment towards interest. If it was so made it does not come within the proviso and no writing is necessary. But if there is no question, of the payment being proved to have been made towards interest at the time it was made, then it must be treated as a payment towards principal, in which case the fact of the payment, and not the fact that the payment is towards the principal, must be recorded in the handwriting of the debtor. ——Payment of interest must be proved—Creditor's admission of receipt not of much weight.

When a creditor comes into Court with a claim which is capable of being regarded as a stale or time-barred claim, it is to his interest to make allegations which would save the claim from the bar of limitation. Having this view, the mere fact that the statement of receipt of interest is against the pecuniary interest of the person making the admission cannot be regarded as of great weight. Section 20 seems to contemplate a person liable to pay the amount and the interest making the payment and paying it for interest as such, and it has been repeatedly held by all the Courts in India that if a general payment should be made by a debtor, and a creditor should appropriate a portion of it towards interest, that would not amount to any payment by the debtor of interest as such and would not have the effect of saving the claim from the bar of limitation. Topham v. Booth, (1887) 35 Ch. ——Agreement as to appropriating towards interest first—General payment and appropriation by creditor—Saves limitation.

Where according to the terms of a mortgage, any payment made by the mortgagor was to be appropriated first to the interest due and the balance to principal, a general payment of debt and its appropriation by creditor accordingly saves limitation if interest is due at the date of payment and the payment does not cease to be payment of interest as such merely because overdue interest is treated under the deed as principal for the purpose of calculating interest. 31 All. 285, Dist.; 43 I.C. 812, Foll. (Krishnan and Venkatasubba, Rao, JJ.). Per Coutts-Trotter, J.—The principle deducible from Chinnery v. Evans, (1864) 11 H.L.C. 115 is this:—That if a debtor's assets are so placed, either by his own act or by operation of law, that, if some one other than he alone can release them for the purpose of making payments due from him, then the act of that other in operating upon the debtor's assets must be treated as the act of the debtor himself, the volition of the debtor in such a case being neither requisite nor relevant. If that be so, it appears to me that the words "his agent duly authorised in that behalf" in S. 20 of the Limitation Act are satisfied by the act of the Judge of Court which authorises the payment, and that his handwriting is rightly described as that of the person making the payment. Held, that when the proper amendment was made, the plaintiff was not introduced as a new party to the suit but was already on the record when the plaint was filed; and consequently the amendment describing him properly at a later stage did not amount to the addition of a new party within the meaning of S. 22. ——Power of Court—Scope of—Change in the name of parties.

The Court has jurisdiction to add or substitute parties suo motu, untramelled by the provisions of the Limitation Act, under O. 1, R. 9 or O. 1, R. 10, sub-R. 2, but it is rightly and finally settled that the Court acting on its own initiative, is no more entitled when making amendments to effect the substitution or addition of parties under these two orders, to disregard the provisions of the Limitation Act, than it would be entitled to do so if the amendment was made upon an application by one of the parties.

Where in the pleadings the defendants are sufficiently described, and, those gentlemen are before the Court, and are parties to the suit an application to amend the plaint, e.g., to substitute for defendants Joharmall Manmull the words "Joharmull Khemka and Manmulla Khemka" would not be for an amendment by which a new party was added, but it would be an amendment merely for the purpose of more clearly describing parties who are already before the Court Such an application would not be within S. 22 of the Limitation Act. ——Manager suing on behalf of temple—Temple's name added.

No substitution or addition of a new plaintiff is made by an amendment where only the description of the plaintiff is corrected. The plaint stated that Hiralal and Tulsiram were managers of the temple. The deed of gift of which the title in suit rested was filed. This deed mentioned the temple as the donee and Hiralal and Tulsiram as the managers.

Held, that the suit was not filed by Hiralal and Tulsiram on their own behalf but on behalf of the temple and the omission to mention the temple in the heading was merely a mistake in the description of the plaintiff. No question of limitation arose when that description was corrected, (Kotwal, A.J.C.). BAKARAM v. HIRALAL.

——Order 1, R. 10, C. P. Code—Appeals.

Section 22 of the Limitation Act does not prescribe any period of limitation for the joinder of a party to a suit under S. 32, C.P. Section 22 of the Limitation Act applies to appeals as much as to suits in principle. But a suit in which a defendant is joined, after the period of the limitation has expired, must necessarily be dismissed as against him. Suit against firm of "Manmal Chandmul". But defendant described as "Hindumal as owner and Manager of shop Manmal Chandmal"—Chandumal having died before suit, his heirs were brought on record but after the period of limitation, Held, that though not in form, but in substance, the plaintiff sued the firm of "Manmal Chandmall.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), S. 22—Proper party but not necessary.

If he had simply described the defendant as "the firm of Manmal Chandmal" without mentioning the names of the owners or partners of the firm, the description would have been sufficient, having regard to the provisions of O. 30 of the C.P. Code In that view the further description of the defendant Chandmal Hindumal as "the Manager and owner of the firm" may be treated as a mere surplusage. Therefore the suit was not barred. If the presence of a party added after the prescribed period is not necessary to enable the Court to award such relief as may be given in the suit framed by the plaintiff and he is joined ex majore cautela the suit is not barred merely because the limitation period had expired at the time when he was impleaded. In a redemption suit filed within time if some persons interested in the equity of redemption, and so necessary parties, are sought to be impleaded after the expiry of limitation, S. 22 does not warrant the dismissal of the suit as time-barred.

The persons so sought to be impleaded are merely necessary for the record in order to satisfy the provisions of O. 34. R. 1. It is within the discretion of the Court under O.1, R 10 sub-R. (2) to make these parties co-defendants, and then to consider after they have been made co-defendants what would be the legal result of such addition.

———Section not exhaustive.

Section 26 provides for the acquisition by peaceable enjoyment without interruption for a period of 20 years of a right of easement either in a water course or in any other matter, but if one is claiming a right given under that section then he has to prove that the right has been exercised for 20 years and that there has been no interruption of the right at any period further back than two years before the commencement of the suit.

The acquisition of the right of easement referred to in S. 26 of the Act is not the only method of acquiring a right of easement. The section is not exhaustive, and if a right of easement is acquired by any other method such as by a grant either proved or implied then S. 26 can have no operation to a suit brought to enforce such a grant. The object of the statute is to make more easy the establishment of rights of easement by allowing an enjoyment of 20 years, if exercised under the conditions prescribed by the Act to give without, more, a title to easement. But the statute is remedial and is neither prohibitory nor exhaustive. A man may acquire a title under it who has no other right at all; but it does not exclude or interfere with other titles and modes of acquiring easements. 6 Cal. 394 (P.C.), Ref and Foll. (*Dawson-Miller, C. ——Effect of adverse possession.

The so-called right of survivorship of each of the daughters of a deceased male Hindu in respect of the property inherited by them from him is incidental to the right of joint possession and enjoyment of the estate with the others who are jointly entitled and cannot exist separately when the right of joint possession and enjoyment has been lost, e.g., by adverse possession by one of the daughters. 9 M.I.A 539 Foll.

The effect of the interests of the excluded sisters being barred and their rights being thus extinguished under the Limitation Act is to enlarge the estate of the adverse possessor and to give her an estate of her own life and the lives of her sisters determinable on the death of the last survivor, and on the death of the adverse possessor such estate will descend to her heirs. ———Nature of the bar.

In the case of a personal action for a debt limitation merely bars the plaintiff from having the particular remedy by way of suit and does not extinguish the debt. Where a Magistrate appoints a Receiver in possession of immovable property, what happens in the eye of the law is that the property is placed in custodia legis, i e., in the custody of the Court for the benefit of the person who may eventually and finally succeed in establishing his title to the property. It is not necessary for the person affected by the order to institute a suit for the recovery of possession of the property. He may institute a suit merely to have his right to the property declared. Further he asked that the mortgage-deed and the award of 1916 should be set aside, Held, that if the suit had been brought only for setting aside the mortgage, it would have been time-barred, but the suit was brought upon the alienation of 1918 in which year the possession was given to the alienee and, was therefore, within time and his prayer that mortgage deed and award should be set aside must be treated as surplusage. 27 Mad. 243 (F. —S. 23—Suit for possession of office of mutawalli.

———Personal action—In such action law of limitation merely bars remedy and not right.

A suit for possession of the office of mutawalli is an action of a personal character and is not "a suit for possession of any property." In personal actions, the law of limitation bars the remedy but not the right. Where the action for possession of the office is statute barred, right to a particular wakf property is not necessarily extinguished under S. 28, which is limited to suits for "possession of property." But a person in adverse possession of property claiming to hold it as mutawalli does not prescribe for more than a mutawalli's right in such property and may acquire to that extent, the status of a mutawalli. The right to office and the right to possession of property are distinct jural concepts, though in the generality of cases the claim to the office of mutawalli and to the property appurtenant thereto are inseparable. This would principally depend upon the terms of the foundation or settlement. 26 Mad 410, Rel. on. (Sen and Niamatullah, JJ.) ABDUL ALIM v. ABDUL HAMID. A.I.R. 1930 All. 866.

—— Effect of Amending Act X of 1922.

The phrase "the remaining provisions of this Act shall not apply" can only mean that the remaining provisions of the Act shall not apply unless they are expressly made applicable by the special or local Act To hold otherwise is to hold that it is a prohibition of the future as well as the past applicati n of those provisions by a special or local Act, which is obviously impossible The amendment of S. 29 of the Limitation Act in 1922 did not restrict its scope but extended it. Under the old S. 29 none of the provisions of the Limitation Act were applicable unless they were expressly included by the special or local Act. —Art. 7—Weighman in shop.

———A weighman employed to work at a shop is not a household servant nor is he an artisan. He cannot be treated as a mere labourer employed to do task work, that is, to hold the scales and weigh goods in a shop for a monthly salary. He can be asked to do other work of the shop when free. He has to count and add up, and may have also perhaps to calculate the price on the total quantity weighed and his work, therefore, cannot be treated as purely manual labour so as to make Art. 7 of the Act applicable. ———Time runs from the date of registration.

The delivery of possession to vendee on the day of his purchase would be of no avail against the pre-emptor, unless the possession delivered was physical possession. The mere delivery of symbolical proprietary possession would not be sufficient.

When there is no proof that physical possession of the property was taken by the vendee on the date on which the sale-deed in his favour was executed, the period of one year within which the pre-emptor was entitled to exercise his right of pre-emption must be taken to have commenced on the date on which the deed in favour of vendee was registered. —Art. 10—Full title not passing.

——Limitation for pre-emption, runs from the date of physical possession and where no physical possession is given limitation runs from the date of mutation or under Art. 10 of the Limitation Act from the date of registration of the sale-deed. The underlying principle governing the limitation in pre-emption suits is that it runs from the date of notice. —Art. 10—Object.

——The object of the Legislature in enacting Art. 10 of the Limitation Act was to provide a period of one year from the date on which the person entitled to pre-empt was expected to know of the transaction sought to be pre-empted, and this knowledge is conveyed either by the delivery of possession, if the property admits of physical possession, or by the registration of the deed of sale, if it is registered: and so far as the reason of the rule is concerned, it is immaterial whether the registration is effected with or without the consent of vendor. In either case registration is equally effective as presumptive evidence of notice of the transaction to the parties concerned. (Shadi Lal, C.J. and Wilberforce, J.). judgment becomes property attached in execution of a decree upon the mere passing of a decree for the plaintiff, either within the meaning of Art. 11 of the Limitation Act or of O. 21, R. 57, as execution may never be applied for, but merely enables the decree-holder to apply for execution by sale of the attached property without a fresh attachment. Where, however, there is an order in execution for the sale of the attached property, that order proceeds upon the footing that the property is to be considered as attached in execution by virtue of R. 11, and a claim put in after that order may properly be regarded as a claim to property attached in execution of a decree within the meaning of Art. 11. —Art. 11—Order without investigation.

———The intention of R. 63 is to include even orders of summary rejections under the proviso to R. 58. A person against whom an order of a summary rejection under the proviso to R. 58 has been passed would have his natural remedy by filing a suit for declaration in the Civil Court. But, if the objector failed to bring a suit, then that order is an order under R. 63 and is conclusive, and the period of limitation which would apply to such a suit is one year under Art. 11, Limitation Act. 116 I.C. 81=26 A.L.J. 794=A.I.R. 1928 All. 327.

——According to the wording of O. 21, R. 63, it is immaterial whether a claim or objection is decided after or without any investigation.

L, a decree-holder, got a buffalo belonging to G, the judgment-debtor, attached. D objected to the attachment on the ground that the animal belonged to him. L stated that he did not wish to contest the objection and the animal was released. The animal was attached a second time, but the same objection was raised by D and allowed by the Court after enquiry. The plaintiff instituted a suit under R. 63 for a declaration that the animal belonged to G,

Held, that L having stated that he did not wish to contest the objection and the animal having been released from attachment, the objection must be taken to be decided and the period of limitation began to run from date of release from attachment. (Bhide, J.). DIAL CHAND v. LACHAMAN SINGH.
104 I.C. 289=A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 680.

——The order contemplated by O. 21, R. 63, refers to any order passed in a removal of attachment case, which is against a party whether his claim has been investigated or not. 41 Mad. 985 (F.B.); 45 C. 785; 41 All. 623, Foll.; 34 C. 491, Dist. (Duckworth and Bo Han, JJ.). ——Claim dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

At the auction sale of certain properties in execution of a money-decree, a mortgagee of the properties applied that the sale proceeds should be kept in Court deposit being subject to his hypothecation. His application was dismissed with the order "Sale is concluded already and decree-holder set off the decree amount. Dismissed."

Held, that order did not amount to any order on the claim within the words of O. 21, R. 63. —Art. 11—Parties to suit.

——Where the judgment-debtor is not made party to the suit.

If a claim preferred by a party under O. 21, R. 58 against the decree-holder attaching a property is allowed and the judgment-debtor is not a party to such claim suit order is not binding on the judgment-debtor so as to compel him to bring a suit for declaration under O. 21, R. 63. If subsequently the claimant brings a suit for possession against the judgment-debtor, the judgment-debtor is not precluded from setting up his title, for an order in the claim suit does not become final under O. 21, R. 63, against the judgment debtor and is not governed by Art. 11, as against the judgment-debtor: 15 Cal. 674, Rel. on; 30 Mad. 335 (F.B.), Cons. (Wort and James, JJ.). ——Subsequent dispossession.

Defendant No. 1 purchased the land in suit in execution of a mortgage decree and took delivery of the same through the Court. Thereupon the plaintiff, who claimed half of each of plots Nos. 1 to 3 and the entirety of plot No. 4 made an application under O. 21, R. 100. That application was dismissed on the 8th July, 1916. As plaintiff was found to be still in possession of the disputed plots of land, the plaintiff did not bring any suit for recovery of possession within a period of one year from 8th July, 1916. His suit was instituted on the 7th March, 1918 and his cause of action was that after the date of the order passed on the application under O. 21, R. 100, defendants Nos. 1 to 5 entered into a conspiracy and forcibly cut and took away the paddy reaped by the Bhag tenants of the plaintiff and thereby dispossessed the plaintiff, —Art. 13—Decision or order, what is.

———Proceedings under Presy. Small Cause Courts Act, Ch. 7.

Orders passed under Chap. 7 of the Presy. Small Cause Courts Act cannot be regarded as a "decision or order" on the question of title. In a subsequent suit against an order under that chapter, there is no necessity to alter or set aside any such "decision or order." Consequently, Art. 13 has no application. —Art. 14—Applicability.

——Orders which must needs be set aside.

Article 14 applies to acts or orders done in the exercise of powers legally exercised by the Executive and before it can be applied the order must be one which needs to be set aside. If in fact there is no provision of law for setting it aside Art. 14 cannot apply. An order in a mutation case directing mutation in the name of a particular person is not such an order and cannot be directly impugned in a civil suit though another person can show by a civil suit that he is the real owner of the property mutated and having established his claim in that suit can then go to Revenue authorities and ask that mutation be made in his name. Held, that the question whether the land was under a grant, or ryoti land should be decided first: without deciding it, it cannot be said that since the order of the Inam Commissioner was not set aside with one year under Art. 14, the defendant is barred from raising the plea. ——Where a person is dispossessed of immovable property by a public servant, it is not the order of the public servant that has to be set aside, but the right of the party to possession that has to be determined. And the party dispossessed is entitled to bring a suit within 12 years from the date of dispossession ; in other words Art. 14 has no application as no order need be set aside in order to obtain relief. ——Suit for declaration that defendants are not permanent tenants of a field and that the order of Revenue Officer to that effect be held as incorrect is governed by Art. 120 and not by Art. 14.

—Art. 14—Estates Partition Act.

——Where the suit for declaration of title was brought in the Civil Court more than one year after the order of the Deputy Collector, which was one passed apparently under S. 57 of the Estates Partition Act.

——Partition under—Land not belonging to estate allotted—Suit to set aside—Article does not apply.

If property which did not fall in any way within the estate which was being partitioned was allocated to one of the persons, who was a party to the partition proceedings it seems incredible to suggest that the person to whom that property so allocated rightly belonged could not within 12 years from the date when his right of action accrued, bring a suit for a declaration of his title and if necessary for recovery of possession of that land in question. Further it matters not whether such claimant was an outsider; that is to say, a person who was not a party to the partition proceedings, or a person who was a party to the partition proceedings. In such a case there is no act or order of an officer of Government in the official capacity which could be regarded as bringing the period of limitation within the purview of Art. 14. ———Where the relief sought is primarily a declaration that the plaintiffs are entitled to succeed, a deceased Hindu female owner as her next reversioners, and where for such a declaration the setting aside of the order of a Sub-Divisional Officer would not be necessary, Art. 14 has no application though the plaint may contain a prayer for the setting aside of the order of a Sub-Divisional Officer. —Art. 14—Order in Revenue Case.

———Section 3 (5) of the Madras Estates Land Act suggests that the order of the Collector is a temporary one. No finality is given to the order in case a Civil Court does not settle the question. The Collector's decision will be ipso facto vacated whenever a Civil Court pronounces on the respective rights of the contending parties. —Art. 14—Possession on Record-of-Rights basis.

———A suit for possession on the strength of entries in Record-of-Rights which were challenged by defendant, is not one brought for the purpose of setting aside any order of the Revenue Court, but it is simply an action in ejectment, its main purpose being to recover possession of certain lands allotted to the plaintiff and Art. 14 does not therefore apply to such a case. —Art. 14—Punjab Redemption of Mortgages Act.

———A mortgagor's right to redeem, which would otherwise be within limitation, is barred if the action is brought later than a year of the date of an order passed to the plaintiff's detriment by the Collector on an application under Punjab Act No. II of 1928. When an order passed under a special act is declared by that act to be conclusive, it cannot be ignored and no relief is open to the aggrieved party unless that order be set aside. An individual who takes advantage of a summary procedure must suffer its disadvantages as well as enjoy its benefits. ———Section 12 of Redemption of Mortgages Act II of 1913 merely points out the results which would ensue if the procedure laid down in that section is not followed. In order to ascertain the period of limitation for such a suit it is necessary that reference should be made to the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, and the only Article in that Act under which the suit could fall is Art. 14, which provides a period of one year's limitation from the date the order complained against is passed. —Art. 14—Summary ejectment.

———Real dispute about title.

Where a private owner of property claims a declaration of title to the property in his peaceful possession, alleging that it is his own property as against the Government and the Government through its officers asserts a claim to that property as the property of the Government, there is a bona fide dispute as to title to the property and the real point of controversy between the two is also one of title to the said property. The mere circumstance that an officer of Government upheld the claim of the Government and gave an order upholding the title of the Government and directing summary ejectment of the private individual from the disputed strip of land, does not alter the nature of the claimants' cause of action nor does it necessitate the asking of any relief other than the one of declaration of title on the part of the private owner. It is sufficient if he establishes his title as against the Government in order to entitle him to hold the property as against the Government. It is wholly superfluous for him to ask the additional relief of cancellation of the order, and therefore such a case is not governed by Art. 14. 24 Bom. 435; 36 Bom. 325 and 39 Bom. 494, Appr. (Kinkhede, A.J.C.). —Art. 36—Goods lost by carrier.

——If possession of carrier is not lawful, Art. 36 applies.

To give rise to these special privileges or liabilities which attach to transactions by or with carriers, the relationship as between a carrier, and his customer has first to be established and, for the presumption of an implied contract to carry, delivery of the goods so as to enable the carrier to acquire lawful possession of the goods for the purpose of carriage is the indispensable essential.

Plaintiff put the goods on the defendant's ferry boat for conveyance and himself got on to it. He found that the boat was being overloaded and feeling it unsafe to travel on it, he got down and wanted to take down his goods but the defendant refused to allow him to do so. The boat started on its journey with his goods and capsized on the way and the goods were lost. He sued to recover price of the goods.

—Art. 44—Cause of action.

A minor's property was alienated by his mother acting as his guardian. The minor died before attaining majority and was succeeded by his mother. After the mother's death the reversionary heirs instituted a suit to set aside the sale more than three years after the minor's death,

Held, that the suit was time-barred.

Where the guardian of a minor alienates the minor's property, the cause of action arises from the date of the alienation. Section 6 only makes minority a cause for suspending limitation. Article 44 cannot therefore be construed so as to give a new cause of action from the time the minor attains majority. Hence when the minor dies before attaining majority, S. 6 (3) comes into play and the period of limitation is to be reckoned from the death of the minor and the fact that the heir of the minor is a female makes no difference. Under the Mahomedan Law a mother has no power as de facto guardian of her infant children to alienate or charge their immovable property. If such an alienation is made it is not necessary for the infants to have it set aside within three years after attainment of majority under Art. 44, because the alienation must be deemed to have been effected, not by a guardian but by a wholly unauthorised person. The infant, whose property has thus been alienated, is consequently entitled to institute a suit for recovery of possession within 12 years from the date of sale, or within three years from the attainment of majority, whichever may be the later date. —Art. 44—Transfer by ward.

———Death of ward—Period of limitation.

A suit by transferee from minor is governed by Art. 44. 42 Bom. 626; 44 Bom. 742 (F.B.), Disc. and Foll.; A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 292, Not foll.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 44—Transfer by ward.

It may be that if the ward dies during his minority Art. 44 will not apply to a suit by his legal representative for recovering the property alienated by the guardian, yet if the ward dies after the attainment of majority, Art. 44 will apply. (Wallace and Thiruvenkatachariar, JJ.). RAMASWAMI v. GOVINDAMMAL. 118 I.C. 481=29 M.L.W. 169=1929 M.W.N. 124=A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 313=56 M.L.J. 332.

The remedy contemplated by Art. 44 is open to a ward for three years from the date of his attaining majority, and that remedy is not lost, by the mere fact that he purports to transfer his interest in the property such as it is at the date of the transfer, to a third party.

Where a minor's property was sold by the minor's guardian and the minor after attaining age transferred the same property to another and where the transferee as the principal plaintiff and the transferor as the second plaintiff sued to set aside the sale within three years of the minor attaining majority,

Held, that the suit was not barred by limitation. (Shah, Ag. C. J. and Kincaid, J.). HANMANT GURUNATH KULKARNI v. RAMAPPA LAGAMAPPA ILAGER. 86 I.C. 879=49 Bom. 309=27 Bom. L.R. 211=A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 292.

—Art. 44—"Transfer of property."

——Expression "Transfer of property" in Art. 44 implies that property has changed hands.

Cases contemplated by Art. 44 are those in which "transfer of property" has been made by a guardian. It implies that the property has changed hands and does not apply to cases where the erstwhile minor is in possession of his property in spite of deeds of transfer executed by the guardian under which either possession does not pass from transferor to transferee, e.g., deed of simple mortgage, or possession has not been parted with though it ought to have been delivered.

A person brought a suit beyond three years of his attaining majority for partition of the house and declaration that the sale effected by his certificated guardian without permission of the District Judge was void and ineffectual as against him. He claimed to be entitled to half share of the house which was so transferred and made the other co-sharer of the house as well as the vendee defendant to the suit. It was found that the plaintiff was all along in possession with the co-sharer,

Held, that Art. 44 did not apply to the case and even if it applied it only barred the remedy of the plaintiff to get the sale-deed set aside but was not fatal to his title which still subsisted and consequently the main relief sought, namely partition as against the co-sharer was not affected by Art. 44. —Art. 45—Award.

——No contest or investigation—Mere confirmation of plaintiff's possession.

The "award" contemplated by Art. 45 presupposes a contest between the parties and a decision after proper investigation into the points at issue. Where there is nothing to indicate that there was any contest or a decision on any investigation, but the only object of the suit is that the plaintiffs may be confirmed in their possession of the lands, if they succeed in it, and the settlement by the revenue authorities, in so far as it determined the amount of the revenue payable in respect of the disputed property, would in no way be affected, the only result being that the plaintiffs would in that case, obtain the benefit of the settlement which a third person obtained from the Government, Art. 45 does not apply. 6 W.R. 317; 11 W.R. 389; 3 C.W.N. 99 and A.I.R. 1922 Cal. 345. Ref. (Cuming and Mukerji, JJ.). —Art. 45—Suit on title.

——Where plaintiff's title was declared against the defendants and the Revenue authorities who had settled the land with the defendants and the plaintiff later on sued for possession, —Art. 46—Bengal Survey Act.

——The order under S. 41 of the Bengal Survey Act has, until reversed or modified by competent authority, the force of an order of a Civil Court declaring the parties to be in possession of the land in accordance with the boundary as determined by the Collector. ——If the whole of the language of Art. 47 be taken into consideration, it is clear that the nature and scope of the suit intended to be comprised in the article must be one whose main object is to set aside the effect of the summary order of a Magistrate with regard to possession in the interest of public peace. —Art. 47—Appointment of Receiver.

———Effect of necessity to bring a suit for possession.

Where a Magistrate appoints a receiver in possession of immovable property, what happens in the eye of the law is that the property is placed in custodia legis, i.e., in the custody of the Court for the benefit of the person who may eventually and finally succeed in establishing his title to the property. It is not necessary for the person affected by the order to institute a suit for the recovery of possession of the property. He may institute a suit merely to have his right to the property declared. If so, Art. 47 would not apply and fortiori the consequences of the operation of S. 28, Limitation Act cannot follow. 26 Mad. 410; 1 Mad. 309 and 20 All. 120, Rel. on; 10 L.W. 637, Not foll. (Srinivasa Ayyangar and Reilly, JJ.). In proceedings taken under S. 145, an adverse order passed against a Hindu father in possession of the property bought on behalf of the joint Hindu family is binding on his undivided sons though they were not parties to the proceedings. ———Section 145, Cr. P. Code, order against Manager—Effect on the sons.

An order under S. 145 was passed against A the manager of the family of the plaintiffs, in favour of the defendants. A died, and the plaintiffs dispossessed the defendants forcibly. They were convicted and the defendants, were put back in possession by the Criminal Court. The plaintiffs thereupon sued for a declaration that they were the owners in possession.

Held, that whether the order under S. 145 was passed against A in his personal capacity or as manager of the family, the plaintiffs are bound thereby and the suit is governed by Art. 47 of the Limitation Act, ——Possession lawful at first and subsequently becoming adverse—Applicability.

Article 49 is the ordinary article to apply in a case where the original possession of the defendant is lawful but it becomes unlawful by reason of certain facts. The common case is the case where the demand is made by the plaintiff, the plaintiff having a right to determine the possession of the defendants. 21 Cal. 157 (P.C.), Dist.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 49 — Original possession permissive.

Plaintiff and his step-brothers formed a joint Hindu family. Plaintiff's mother and father died in 1905 and 1909 respectively. The mother left certain valuable ornaments which continued to be in the joint family even after the death of the plaintiff's father. During all the time plaintiff was living with the step-brothers. Plaintiff attained majority in 1910. Step-brothers never claimed the ornaments as their own though they were in their possession. In 1920 there was a partition and in September 1920 the plaintiff brought the suit to recover those ornaments. It was contended that the suit was time-barred,

Held, that Art. 49 applied and the suit was not time-barred, as the time began to run against him in 1920 when he claimed that step-brothers should make over the ornaments to him. —Art. 60—Banker.

——Who is.

Under Art. 60 it is not necessary to prove that the borrower was carrying on business only as banker. A man might become a banker or place himself in the position of banker, with regard to a particular customer, and if the dealings between the lender and the borrower are such that the Court is satisfied that it could be said that the borrower is in the position of a banker to the lender, then the money so lent could be considered as a deposit. —Art. 60—Deposit and loan.

——Distinction between.

It is not clear what the Legislature meant by the word "deposited" in Art. 60 but there must be some difference between "money lent" and "money deposited" and one can only assume that a plaintiff relying upon Art. 60 must prove that something took place between the parties at the time the money passed which would constitute the handing over of the money "a deposit," and "not a loan". Ordinarily when A hands over money to B on the understanding that it is not a gift, but was to be re-paid when demanded, that would be considered in law "a loan"; and when the plaintiff seeks to prove that the money so handed over was a deposit, the onus would lie upon him to prove that there are additional circumstances which turned the "loan" into a "deposit," there is no distinction in the Act between the money lent and money deposited with regard to the agreement to re-pay. So that it is not the agreement that the money should be payable on demand that distinguishes a deposit from a loan. There must be something further proved, and it is not possible to define exactly what that something further must be. It has some times been suggested that facts must be proved which create a sort of fiduciary relationship between the lender and the borrower. It cannot be said that that is always necessary. (Macleod, C.J. and Crump, J.). GOVIND CHINTAMAN v. KACHUBHAI GULABCHAND. 73 I.C. 978=25 Bom. L.R. 503=A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 28.

In a certain contract for the sale of property the vendor was to satisfy certain conditions before completion of the contract, but no time was specified for it. The vendor mortgaged the property to another and afterwards it was sold in satisfaction of that mortgage. The purchaser then sued for recovery of deposit money.

Held, that the purchaser need not have sued within a reasonable time. It was Art. 97 and not 60 nor 115, that governed such a case, and time was to be counted since when the property was sold in satisfaction of the mortgage, because it was then that the contract, having become impossible of performance, ended. —Art. 60—Deposit, what is.

———Relationship of Banker and customer essential.

Where a partner opened a separate account in his daughter's name in partnership books, and the account had been made up every year and interest added to it and the balance carried forward to the new year and there were payments in of small sums of money from time to time and a withdrawal of Rs. 100,

Held, that the account was not merely a loan to the firm but comes within the definition of a deposit under Art. 60 being moneys of a customer in the hands of his banker payable on demand. Really there is no distinction between a deposit and a loan because they are both moneys lent by the customer to the bank, but it is necessary for the purpose of considering whether Art. 60 applies to see whether the relationship of customer and banker arose between these parties. (Kemp, J.). HIRABAI GOPALDAS v. DHANJIBHAI B. KAVARANA. 102 I.C. 145=29 Bom. L.R. 427=A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 433.

—Art. 61—Rent and taxes paid by vendor.

——In the absence of a contract to the contrary the liability of a vendee of property or the transferee of a lease to pay rents and charges arises only on the date of sale or transfer of the lease and not the date of contract of transfer. There is no distinction between the sale of immovable property and the transfer of a lease in this respect but where the transferee enters into possession on the date of contract, he is bound to pay the charges of such property in his possession, and if the transferor pays the same, he can recover them from the transferee. Section 69, Contract Act applies to such a case. The article of Limitation Act applicable to such a suit is Art. 61 and time runs from the date of payment. —Art. 61—Starting point.

——Vendee undertaking to pay creditor—Failure to pay.

Part of the consideration in case of purchase of a property was a sum of money to be paid by the vendee to the creditor of the vendor. The vendee failed to pay. On being sued by the creditor for the debt the vendor had to pay double the amount principal and interest included. In a suit by the vendor for compensation,

Held, the plaintiff's cause of action accrued to him on the date he was obliged to pay to his creditor the sum of money which the defendant was himself under an obligation to pay. (Lindsay, J.). BRIKANT PANDE v. PANDIT JAMNA DHAR. 70 I.C. 582=A.I.R. 1922 All. 409.

———Money expended to protect property—Claim for.

There was a dispute between A and B, and C was put in charge of the property as a supurdar pending the determination of the right of A and B. After these rights were determined and C had restored possession. C was sued for their wages by two watchmen whom he had appointed to watch the standing crop. C paid up the decrees and instituted a suit against A and B for recovery of the money he had to pay to the watchmen, Held, that the suit was governed by Art. 61 or Art. 120 and not by Art. 102. C was entitled to be reimbursed by A and B. The cause of action in favour of C arose when he paid up the decrees, and suit by him within three years of payment was in time. (Srivastava, J.). LACHMI NARAIN v. PUTTI LAL. A. I. ———Where in a suit for recovery of money paid by plaintiffs on defendant's behalf the plaintiffs come into Court asserting that they had been obliged to pay the money as sureties and their whole cause of action is that they had been treated as sureties for defendant. —Art. 62—Applicability.

———Mortgagor's suit for amounts received by mortgagee.

Article 62 contemplates a suit in which the plaintiff is entitled to obtain the whole of the money received as soon as it is received. Where a mortgagor receives a certain sum from Insurance Company, the property mortgaged being destroyed by fire, a suit for accounts by mortgagor is governed by Art. 120 and not by Art. 62 inasmuch as the mortgagee has a lien on the moneys he received and is entitled to retain those moneys until his mortgage is satisfied. ———Undertaking to pay lawful, charges during management.

Article 62 does not apply to transactions, in which the defendant is not under a mere duty to hand over the money which he received, but has other duties as well in respect of it. Where, therefore, under a partition deed it was arranged that the senior co-parcener and the minor should enjoy their share of the property jointly and as manager it was the duty of the senior co-parcener not merely to account for the money received, but to pay the kist and the other expenses as well, as to maintain the minor :

—Art. 62—Benami transaction.

———Money received by benamidar.

The money which the benamidar realises in the decree in his favour is money had and received for the beneficial owners. The mere fact that the defendant (the benamidar) could recover rent for a longer period by reason of his minority does not affect the question. Where the money could not have been realised for the full period claimed if the suit had been brought by true owner ;

Held, since the defendant chose to bring a suit for rent which was in reality payable to the plaintiff and he could obtain a decree for that rent by reason of his minority that does not disentitle the plaintiff from getting the money which has in fact been received by the defendant for the use of the plaintiff. 25 All. 62; 32 Cal. 527 and 37 All. 232, Ref. (Banerji and Gokul Prasad, JJ.). Although privity of contract is not necessary for the purposes of Art. 62, there must be some privity of a legally recognizable nature such as some knowledge of particular facts in the man who received the money or some mistake or ignorance of facts on the part of the man who paid the money or some relation of trust and confidence between them on which the Court could fasten as creating the relation of principal and agent (though by fiction) between the plaintiff and defendant. 41 Mad. 923, Foll. (*Shadi Lal, C. The form of suit indicated by this article is applicable where the defendant has received money which, in justice and equity, belongs to the plaintiff, under such circumstances as in law renders the receipt of it a receipt by the defendant to the use of the plaintiff. ——A sale-deed contained a clause that if the minor nephew of the vendor on attaining majority raised any objection to the sale of his share the vendor would make over to the vendee an equal area out of his own land. Mutation of the minor's share of the land was refused in 1907 on objection by the minor's mother; plaintiff sued for declaration that he was owner of the whole land purchased by him. His suit was dismissed, so far as the minor's share was concerned in 1911. In 1917 the minor, having attained majority mortgaged his share to one G, who dispossessed the plaintiff from the land in 1919. Plaintiff brought a suit to enforce the indemnity clause contained in his deed of sale in the alternative for Rs. 1,000, being the value of the minor's share :

As regards the claim for recovery of the purchase money, it was governed either by Art. 62 or 97 of the Limitation Act. If the claim was governed by Art. 62, it was barred by time inasmuch as limitation began to run from the date of the sale. If the claim was governed by Article 97, it was equally barred by time, inasmuch as limitation began to run when the plaintiff's title was first denied in 1907 or at the latest when it was declared in 1911 that he had no title. ——Failure of defendant to pay.

The plaintiff had to satisfy a mortgage. The defendant undertook by writing registered to pay the mortgage amount to the mortgagee and to procure an indemnity or freedom of the mortgaged property from all liability and the plaintiff sold to him in consideration of that contract and of the promise to pay a house and kotha. The defendant did not fulfil his undertaking and consequently the mortgagee sued for and obtained a preliminary decree. The plaintiff induced the mortgagee to accept a renewal of the mortgage and include in the consideration thereof the decretal debt and thus discharge him from the liability and sued defendant for compensation for breach of the contract,

Held, that the suit was governed by Art. 116 and not Art. 111 or Art. 62. (Kinkhede, A. J. C.). VINAYAK RAO v. SHRIPATRAO. 97 I.C. 185= 9 N.L.J. 107=A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 429.

———Where a deed of further charge provided that the interest will be paid year by year; in case of default it will be added to the principal and compound interest will be charged; that the mortgagee might realise the interest every year by suit or might have it added to the principal and that at the time of redemption or foreclosure of a previous mortgage the total interest due would be deemed to be a separate item which the mortgagee would be entitled to recover from the person and other property of the mortgagees,

Held, that the deed gave the plaintiff an option either to sue for his interest year by year or to allow it to be compounded and to sue for it at the time of redemption or foreclosure of the previous mortgage, and therefore, the claim for interest at the time of a suit for foreclosure would not be barred by limitation, nor was a suit for the interest due along with a suit for foreclosure premature. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 64—Applicability.

———Essentials for applicability.

A settlement in order to constitute a fresh cause of action in law must be a settlement of a mutual, current and open account, i.e., a settlement in which both parties coming together set off their mutual rights and liabilities and arrive at a particular figure as the result of such set off. Also, under Art. 64, the settlement must be in writing and signed by the defendant or his duly authorized agent. (Srinivasa Aiyangar, J.). ASIRVADA NADAN v. VEDAMUTHU NADAN. 86 I. C. 942= A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 1147.

———What constitutes.

An account stated implies cross demands and it is the mutual surrender of these cross-demands that creates the new contract when an account is stated between the parties. In the absence of any cross demands there is nothing to take the settlement of account out of the ordinary rule. (Das and Ross, JJ.). ———Effect of.

An "account stated" does not extinguish the original debts on which the account is based. Therefore, it is open to the creditor to base his suit for the recovery of debts either on the "account stated" or on the original contract.

The Limitation Act does purport to deal with causes of action. (Jwala Prasad, A C.J. and Das, J.). BHATU DAS v. MUSSAMMAT BIBI IZZATUN NISHA. 63 I.C. 280 (Pat.).

Held, the entry is an account rendered adjusting the relations of the parties and is a promise to pay, and the suit therefore falls under Art. 64, the time under which is enlarged to 6 years by Punjab Limitation Act. Article 106 does not apply to the suit as this suit is not for an account, i.e., an unascertained share of the profits of a dissolved partnership. (Le Rossignol and Martineau, JJ.). —Art. 64—Partnership.

——Suit on accounts reciting defendants credits and debits.

Plaintiffs and defendants were partners in certain transactions and all accounts relating to these transactions were entered either in the books of the commission agents or in those of defendants. After examining the accounts on 3rd August, 1920 an entry was made in the books of the plaintiffs in two columns. On the credit side was shown the plaintiff's share of the profits. On the debit side was shown the plaintiff's share of loss incurred. This was followed by a writing in defendant's own hand to the effect that the above mentioned accounts were correct as having been arrived at as the plaintiff's share of the profit after division.

On 15th June, 1925 the plaintiffs instituted a suit against the defendants for recovery of the sum due on foot of this entry.

——Bond debt—Debt due at once if default made—Creditor's option.

Where a debt incurred on a registered simple bond was to be paid within seven years, but on default to pay interest consecutively for two years it was to become payable at once and a default was made,

Held, that the bond was not a 'single' bond of that there was no 'specified day of payment' that therefore the article that applies for a suit on the bond is not Art. 66 but Art. 80. Where such a condition exists the question is not one of waiver but of a pure contract and the creditor is entitled to adopt either of the two alternatives expressly contemplated by the bond. Where an administration bond contains several conditions, a breach of each one of the conditions gives rise to a course of action and should therefore be taken to be the starting point of limitation in the case of a suit based on that particular breach. Ordinarily, the administrator's work may be said to be completed when he files his final accounts showing how he has dealt with the estate and these accounts have been accepted by the Court; limitation will then begin to run. But it very often happens that there is litigation pending against the administrator and, in such a case the administrator (and consequently his surety or sureties) cannot be absolved until the close of each litigation. 33 All. 414, Diss.; 8 L. ——Default clause—Option of creditor—When it comes to an end.

Where an instalment bond provided for full payment in case of default and the creditor sued for whole only when the last instalment fell due,

Held, that the claim for nine instalments was barred.

The plaintiff has an option till the last instalment falls due to claim the whole amount including the last instalment. But where the last instalment fell due the option was gone. Where the option is given to obligee to claim the whole amount on default of payment of an instalment without reference to subsequent instalments, the provision cannot be held to extend the period of limitation to three years from the date the last instalment fell due. On the making of a demand the whole amount becomes due and time would begin to run from the date of the demand. If no demand is made the option given to the plaintiff is gone and time begins to run in respect of each instalment as it becomes due. That which was optional on the part of the plaintiff would not affect the right of the defendant. He might well consider the action as accruing from the time that the plaintiff had a right to maintain it. (1919) M.W.N. 82 and (1919) M.W.N. 185, Dist.; 8 Bom. 561, Dist.; (1843) 4 Q. ———Creditors option.

A compromise decree provided that the decree-holder should get a certain sum in full payment of his decree, that the judgment-debtor should pay a sum of money forthwith and the balance in monthly instalments from October, 1924, and in default of payment of four instalments the decree-holder would realize the whole of the decretal amount with interest at a higher rate; the last clause of the agreement was that the house belonging to the judgment-debtor should remain charged for the decretal amount and that the decree-holder should in default of payment realise the same by sale of the house with interest from the date of default of any payment. The initial payment was made and also the first two instalments and thereafter payment ceased. On the 10th of December, 1928, an application for execution of the decree was made. It was argued that under the terms of the compromise the whole debt became due in April, 1925, and that application was more than 3 years after that date.

Held, that when all the clauses of the agreement were read together, the intention of the parties was to leave it at the option of the decree-holder either to enforce the payment of the whole of the decretal amount at once or to continue to abide by the instalments and that he was entitled to recover the instalments which were due for 3 years before the application. ———Intention of the parties.

In an instalment bond with a condition of exigibility on one default the question as to when time begins to run really depends upon the construction of the document and the contract between the parties. —Art. 75—Waiver.

——Creditor can waive—Cause of action—Demand.

It is a well-established principle of law that a person cannot be compelled to take advantage of a forfeiture clause and Art. 75 itself provides that an obligee can waive benefit of the provision giving him the right to recover the whole of the money in the event of default.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 75—Waiver.

Where the bond provides that in case of default being made in the payment of two instalments the whole amount would become due only if a demand for such amount were made and there is also a stipulation to the effect that even after the whole amount has become payable the creditor would have the option of recovering either the whole of the amount or only the instalments and arrears, the language of the document clearly shows that the intention of the parties was that unless and until plaintiff made a demand the whole of the money should not be payable by the defendant to him. The covenant in the mortgage deed as to re-payments was to the effect that the mortgage money with interest would be paid by monthly instalments of not less than Rs. 20 plus interest, the payment being made on the 1st day of November, 1899, and on the first day of every succeeding month, provided that the entire advance together with interest thereon would be fully liquidated within ten years from the date of the mortgage. It was also agreed that defaults in payment of monthly instalments and interest as agreed should constitute separate causes of action,

Held, by providing that default in the payment of each monthly instalment should constitute a separate cause of action, the parties clearly intended that prompt payments should be made and that the period of limitation should run from the date of default unless the payee waived the benefit of the provisions of prompt payment in case of default. in the case of a suit based on that particular breach. Ordinarily, the administrator work may be said to be completed when he files his final accounts, showing how he has dealt with the estate, and these accounts have been accepted by the Court; limitation will then begin to run. But it very often happens that there is litigation pending against the administrator and, in such a case the administrator (and consequently his surety or sureties) cannot be absolved until the close of each litigation. 33 All. 414, Diss.; 8 L.B.R. 99 and 17 M.L.T. 61, Foll.; 12 B.L.T. 225, Expl. (Robinson, C.J. and May Oung, J.). —Art. 80—Mortgage-deed.

———Failure to pay instalments—Mortgage suit barred—Personal remedy.

The trial Court relying on a clause in the mortgage-deed which entitled the mortgagee to sue for the whole amount of principal and interest, on default of payment of annual interest, held that the claim to enforce the charge was barred by time under Art. 132 of the Limitation Act, but it was however of opinion that the personal remedy based on the bond was not barred. It accordingly granted the plaintiff a simple money-decree. The lower Appellate Court holding that the personal remedy also was barred, dismissed the whole suit,

Held, although the relief for recovery of money otherwise than by enforcing the charge would be governed by another article with a different period fixed, yet it would be a startling thing to find that the time for recovery of the amount due by sale of the property has begun to run, while that for recovering it as a simple debt has not yet started; and that the bond does not fall either under Art. 66 or Art. 68 or Art. 75, but falls under Art. 80 read with Art. 116, and that the time began to run against the mortgagee for both the reliefs claimed from the date of the first default, when the money became payable. 19 A.L.J. 406; 15 A.L.J. 313; 3 All. 600 (F.B), Diss. (*Mears, C. —Art. 80—Registered bond.

———Whole debt due on default of instalments—Creditor's option—Alternative remedy.

Where a debt incurred on a registered simple bond was to be paid within seven years, but on default to pay interest consecutively for two years it was to become payable at once and a default was made,

Held, that the bond was not a 'single' bond of that there was no 'specified day of payment' that therefore the article that applies for a suit on the bond is not Art. 66 but Art. 80. Where such a condition exists the question is not one of waiver but of a pure contract and the creditor is entitled to adopt either of the two alternatives expressly contemplated by the bond: The original promise to pay the debt within seven years, gave another remedy to the creditor to enforce at the end of that period. The failure to sue within time from the default does not bar the second remedy: 16 O.C. 45, Doubted but Foll. (Wasir Hasan, A.J.C.). ——Each party must have paid and received.

"To constitute mutual account it is not sufficient that one of the two parties should have received money and paid it on account of the other. The reason of that distinction is that in the case of proceedings at law, where each of the two parties has received and paid on account of the other what would have to be recovered would be the balance of the two accounts; and the party plaintiff would be required to prove, not merely that the other party had received money on his account but also to enter into evidence of his own receipts and payments, a position of the case, which to say the least, would be difficult to be dealt with at law. Where one party has merely received and paid moneys on account of the other it becomes a simple case, but it is otherwise where each party has received and paid." ——Shifting balance.

Mutual accounts are such as consist of reciprocity of dealings between the parties and do not embrace those having items on one side only though made up of debits and credits. Although a shifting balance, sometimes in favour of one side and sometimes in favour of the other, is a test of mutuality, its absence is not conclusive proof against mutuality.

Where a man lends money in one capacity, and in another capacity acts as an agent for the borrower and the two accounts are put together, there is a mutuality of dealing between the parties, although the money may have been lent for the express purposes of enabling the borrower to provide business as commission agent to the lender. The plaintiffs sued the defendants on accounts claiming Rs. 1,450. The suit was instituted on the 30th of August, 1918. The accounts showed a balance struck of Rs. 361-6 in favour of the plaintiffs on the 20th May, 1913. Thereafter the accounts continued for another year and ended with a total in favour of the plaintiffs of Rs. 832-9. No second balance was struck formally. Interest at 1 per cent. per mensem was claimed bringing the amount in suit up to Rs. 1,450,

Held, that the article applicable was Art. 57 for which the period is six years under the Punjab Loans Limitation Act of 1904, the balance being an acknowledgment starting fresh period of limitation under S. 19 of Act IX of 1908. An account is mutual when there are transactions on each side creating independent obligations on the other, and, where the transactions create obligations on one side only, those on the other being merely complete or partial discharges of such obligations, the account is not mutual. 59 I.C. 669, Appl. (Campbell and Moti Sagar, JJ.). THAKUR DAS v. BISHAN DAS. 79 I.C. 998=A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 636.

——Reciprocity of transactions—Shifting balance—What is necessary to prove.

In order that accounts might be mutual, there must be transactions on each side, creating independent obligations on the other, and not merely transactions which create obligations on the one side, those on the other being merely complete or partial discharges of such obligations. Where there is a case of shifting balance, sometimes in favour of one side, sometimes in favour of the other, it is a test of mutuality, but its absence is not conclusive proof against mutuality. If there is a balance in favour of either party, it follows that there must be mutual liabilities of both parties to each other; if the balance is always in favour of one party in the very nature of the transactions, then the case is one where there are not separate mutual dealings.

In order to prove a mutual and open account current, it is sufficient to prove mutual dealings between the parties consisting of sales made, or services performed, by each party, to or, for the other, creating mutual duties or reciprocal demands. Where there was an obligation, on the one hand, to pay salary and an obligation on the other hand, to account for and pay over to the principal the amounts that may yearly be found due on balance to the principal,

Held, this is mutual account. (Schwabe, C.J. and Wallace, J.). KUNHI KUTTIALI v. KUNHAMMAD. 71 I.C. 466=17 M.L.W. 243=1923 M.W.N. 81= A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 278=44 M L.J. 184.

———Test—Intention of parties and possibility of balance on both sides.

The fact that the balance was always in fact in favour of the same party does not prevent the account from being mutual, open and current. The test is the intention of the parties and indeed it is quite probable that there may be times at which the balance stood in favour of the defendant though the accounts were never made up at any such time. ———Accounts — Current and mutual—Test of mutuality.

Where an account does not indicate transactions creating independent obligations on both sides but there is sometimes a credit in favour of the defendant and that only for a few days,

Held, the account is not a mutual account, and in a suit on such an account the plaintiff is not entitled to the benefit of Art. 85 of Sch. 1 to the Limitation Act.

An account current is an open or running account between two or more parties, or an account which contains items between the parties from which the balance due to one of them is, or can be ascertained from which it follows that such an account comes under the term of open account in so far as it is running, unsettled or unclosed. Mutual accounts are such as consist of reciprocity of dealings between the parties, and do not embrace those having items on one side only, though made up of debits and credits.

The tests of mutuality is that the dealings between the parties should be such that the balance is sometimes in favour of the other. An account which consists of entries of payments made by one party in reduction of a debt to another and of payments made by the latter on behalf of the former, is not a mutual account (Coutts and Ross, JJ.). ——It is well-settled that an open account is one which is continuous or current, uninterrupted or unclosed by settlement or otherwise consisting of a series of transactions. A current account has been held to be an open or running account between two or more parties or an account which contains items between the parties from which the balance due to one of them is or can be ascertained. Mutual accounts are accounts which show reciprocity of dealings between the parties and do not embrace those having items on one side only though made up of debits and credits. ——Mere totalling up of entries does not close the account.

The agent for both the parties lent money on behalf of one firm to himself as agent for the other firm. Each of those loans gave rise to a right of setoff or claim against the borrower, and as both plaintiff and defendant were on occasions the lenders, these transactions gave rise to reciprocal demands from time to time. The accounts were never settled.

Held, the fact that the agent for his own convenience totalled up the position and made entries of the result in each firm's books did not close the account. It was continuous and was therefore, an open and current account, and having regard to the mutual loans, it was also a mutual account. 8 L.B.R. 149, Dist. (Robinson, C.J. and MacGregor, J.). R. Held, the article applicable is Art. 64 which applies to a suit for money payable for money found to be due on accounts stated. (Le Rossignol and Abdul Qadir, JJ.). FIRM GURUDAS v. BHAGWAN DAS. 68 I.C. 815=A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 182.

—Art. 85—Striking of balance.

———Mere delay in suing—Character not changed.

The plaintiffs sued to recover the balance due on cross-transactions in which each side supplied the other with goods in kind. There were mutual dealings and though balances were struck from time to time these were merely acknowledgments and not agreements to pay.

Held, the case is one not of a stated account but of a mutual, open and current account, where there have been reciprocal demands between the parties. The case is, therefore, governed by Art. 85 and not by Arts. 64 or 57. The mere fact that the plaintiffs have allowed a considerable time to elapse before suing cannot in any way change the nature of the account; nor can it be held that an account becomes closed whenever a balance is struck. (Chevis and Harrison, JJ.). JWALA DAS v. HUKUM CHAND. 66 I.C. 387=A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 316.

—Art. 85—Test for application.

———Under Art. 85 the account between the parties must be mutual, open and current indicating reciprocal demands between the parties. It is sufficient if the dealings are such that the balance might have been in favour of either party; it is not essential that the balance should in fact have been in favour of the defendants at some stage.

Per Crump, J.—The words "where there have been reciprocal demands between the parties" in Art. 85 taken literally may no doubt give rise to some difficulty, but those words have been interpreted as meaning that the nature of the accounts is such as to create reciprocal demands. They are in fact words in the nature of a definition but are not intended to postulate that there should have been reciprocal demands in fact. (Shah, Ag. C. J. and Crump, J.). LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 89 — Death of agent.

———Mutuality and reciprocity.

The test of applying Art. 85 is mutuality and reciprocity; therefore where there are entries on one side showing cash advances, price of cloth sold, payment made to third person on behalf of the defendants for things supplied and commission charged, for purchases made by plaintiff for defendants and on the other side there are entries showing that the plaintiff firm received various kinds of grains from the defendant and having sold them in the market credited the proceeds to the defendants, the suit comes under Art. 85 of the Limitation Act. (Abdul Raoof and Harrison, JJ.). ABDUL HAQ v. FIRM SHIVJI RAM. 71 I.C. 259=A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 338.

———Where the balance claimed is due on a mutual, open and current account and there have been reciprocal demands between the parties the suit is governed by Art. 85 of the First Schedule of the Limitation Act and not by Art. 57 of the Punjab Loans Limitation Act. In order to bring the case within the latter article the plaintiffs have to make out that the claim, was for money payable for money lent. A mere striking of balance is no evidence of a new contract. (Abdul Raoof and Martineau, JJ.). RATAN CHAND JOWALA DAS v. ASA SINGH, BOGA SINGH. 62 I.C. 898= 4 L. L.J. 217=A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 188.

———The test for the application of Art. 85 appears to be whether the dealings are mutual, that is to say, entered in an account consisting of mutual items of debit and credit and not whether they might give rise to independent obligations or reciprocal demands, or whether the balance might shift from one side to the other. Art. 85 contemplates mutual dealings, and it was intended that if there was a continuous account of mutual dealings, then for the purposes of a suit that period of limitation should be computed from the close of the year in which the last item admitted or proved was entered in the account. 1 I.A. 346 (P.C.), Ref. (Macleod, C.J. and Shah, J.). ——Termination of agency by closing the transactions

Plaintiff had certain transactions in cotton, wheat, etc., with three different firms, which acted as his agents for the purpose. The last date of the transactions was 19th May, 1918. Thereafter no transaction took place, but accounts were not rendered. Subsequently the three firms were merged in the defendant firm; and the latter firm was sued for accounts by the plaintiff as the representative of the three firms in 1924,

Held, that the period of limitation began to run from the date of the last transaction and hence the suit was out of time. 39 Mad. 376, Rel. on; 26 Cal. 715 and 12 All. 546, Dist. (Bhide, J.). RUCHIRAM SUKHA NAND v. CHARAN DAS.

interest of the principal—Suit is not cognizable by Small Cause Court.

The plaintiffs' father purchased certain property and entrusted the management of the same to the defendant, the maternal uncle of the plaintiffs. The father advanced certain sums of money from time to time to the defendant in order that the same might be lent to the tenants. The father died in September, 1918. The defendant refused to render an account of the monies that he received and realised sometime in 1921. Plaintiffs then filed the suit,

Held, the suit was one for accounts by the legal representatives of the principal against agent, and Art. 89 of the Limitation Act applied. (Mukerji, J.). MAHADEO PRASAD v. SOORAJ PRASAD.

—Art. 91—Suit for declaration and possession.

———Document void.

Article 91 applies to a suit to cancel or set aside an instrument not otherwise provided for. It does not apply to a suit for possession and a declaration that an instrument under which the defendant claims is void. (Das and Adami, JJ.). MT. BIBI KANI ZAINAB v. SYED MOBARAK HOSSAIN. 72 I.C. 748=A.I.R. 1924 Pat. 284.

———Document void—Article does not apply—If voidable, article applies.

Where a suit is brought for a declaration that certain instrument is absolutely void and inoperative as having been obtained by fraud and that plaintiff is entitled to the properties covered by the deed, the relief as to the declaration of the deed as void, is superfluous and Art. 95 does not apply to the suit, but Art. 120 applies.

Per Richardson, J.—If a plaintiff comes into Court to have a particular written instrument set aside or cancelled, then, prima facie Art. 91 is applicable whether the ground on which the claim is made is fraud or some other ground. 15 C. 58 (P.C.) and 25 Bom. 337 (P.C.), Foll.

A distinction however can be drawn between void and voidable instruments. Article 91 does not apply to instruments which are void ab initio so as not to require setting aside. When the instrument is voidable it is presumably valid, and binding on the plaintiff, until it is set aside, and any further relief which may be sought depends on the removal of the instrument from the plaintiff's path. In such a case Art. 91 applies. But if the facts alleged by the plaintiff raise a case that the instrument, whether executed by the plaintiff himself or by some third party through whom he claims, is null and void ab initio, then Art. 91 ceases to be applicable and the circumstances may entitle the plaintiff to the benefit of the longer period of limitation allowed by some other article such as Art. 120 or Art. 144.

Where the plaintiff raises the plea known to English lawyers as non est factum, if he should succeed in establishing that plea, then the instrument in question would be altogether void. It would not require setting aside and the prayer to set it aside would be merely superfluous, so that Art. 91 would be inapplicable. (Sanderson, C.J. and Richardson, J.). ——Where the relief cognizable by Civil Court is to set aside document as forged.

Plaintiff, an ex-proprietary tenant, sued for a declaration that she had an ex-proprietary right in respect of the lands specified and that a registered deed of relinquishment dated the 19th January, 1918 was forged and was null and void and ineffectual as against her. The suit was brought more than three 'years' after 19th January, 1918,

Held, so far as the relief concerning the document was concerned, the suit was one for a declaration that the registered document was forged and as such that relief clearly was barred under Art. 92. Assuming that the relief asking for a declaration that the document was forged was not to such an extent the principal relief in the case that the period of limitation provided for that relief would govern the whole suit, still, so far as the declaration of plaintiff's right was concerned it was clearly a matter which must be determined in the Revenue Court by virtue of S. 167, Agra Tenancy Act. ——Contract of sale becoming impossible of performance—Starting point.

In a certain contract for the sale of property the vendor was to satisfy certain conditions before completion of the contract, but no time was specified for it. The vendor mortgaged the property to another and afterwards it was sold in satisfaction of that mortgage. The purchaser then sued for recovery of deposit money.

Held, that the purchaser need not have sued within a reasonable time. It was Art. 97 and not 60 nor 115, that governed such a case, and time was to be counted since when the property was sold in satisfaction of the mortgage because it was, then that the contract, having become impossible of performance ended. A plaintiff purchased some property. There had been a previous deed of gift but the deed of transfer recited that it was a nullity, which meant that the vendor was able to give a good title, but it turned out that he was not. The plaintiff filed a suit for possession and succeeded in the lower Court but on appeal he lost his suit.

Plaintiffs purchased a certain property from a Hindu father and the sale was subsequently cancelled in a suit by the sons to set it aside on their depositing a certain sum in Court. Plaintiffs sued the sons of vendor, for the balance of the purchase money.

Held, that the suit is not barred by the principles of res judicata as money paid to the father as consideration for the sale at the time of the sale cannot be regarded as a debt of the father until the sale had been set aside and the right of the vendee to get back the sale consideration from the father has accrued. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 97—Refund of purchase-money.

———Vendee subsequently ousted by third party—Applicability—Starting point.

Plaintiffs bought land under a registered deed and were put in possession. The land was leased to a tenant who subsequently set up his own title to the land and his claim was also embodied in a final decree of the Court. Plaintiffs then filed a suit against their vendor for the recovery of the purchase money, etc.,

Held, that Art. 116 and not 97 applied and time began to run only when the tenant obtained the decree supporting his own title to the land.

A distinction should be made between cases where from the inception the vendor had no title to convey and the vendee has not been put in possession of the property, and other cases where the sale is only voidable on the objection of third parties and possession is taken under the sale. It is only in the first class of cases that the starting point of limitation will be the date of sale. Case-law discussed. (Macleod, C.J. and Fawcett, J.). ———Starting point.

A sale-deed contained a clause that if the minor nephew of the vendor on attaining majority raised any objection to the sale of his share the vendor would make over to the vendee an equal area out of his own land. Mutation of the minor's share of the land was refused in 1907; plaintiff sued for declaration that he was owner of the whole land purchased by him. His suit was dismissed, so far as the minor's share was concerned, in 1911. In 1917 the minor, having attained majority mortgaged his share to one G, who dispossessed the plaintiff from the land in 1919. Plaintiff brought a suit to enforce the indemnity clause contained in his deed of sale in the alternative for Rs. 1,000 being the value of the minor's share.

As regards the claim for recovery of the purchase-money, it was governed either by Art. 62 or 97 of the Limitation Act. If the claim was governed by Art. 62 it was barred by time inasmuch as limitation began to run from the date of the sale. If the claim was governed by Art. 97, it was equally barred by time, inasmuch as limitation began to run when the plaintiff's title was first denied in 1907 or at the latest when it was declared in 1911 that he had no title. ———Breach of covenant for title.

Under the Indian Law and procedure an original decree is not suspended by presentation of an appeal nor is its operation interrupted where the decree on appeal is one of dismissal and, therefore, the time from which the period of limitation ought to be counted is the date of the decree of the first Court. Where under a sale-deed the purchaser paid certain sums of money to the secured creditors of the vendor and when the vendor failed to make good title, he sued for recovery of the sums so paid, more than 3 years after payment and after losing possession.

Held, in all cases where, after the dissolution and complete winding up of a partnership, an asset which had not been taken into account fell in, it ought to be divided between the ex-partners or their representatives according to their shares in the former partnership. If on the other hand no accounts have been taken and there is no contest, that the partners have squared up, then the proper remedy, where such an item falls in, is to have the accounts of the partnership taken; and if it is too late to have recourse to that remedy, then it is also too late to claim a share in an item as part of the partnership assets, and the plaintiff does not prove and cannot prove that upon the due taking of the accounts he would be entitled to that share. 5 H. No suit can lie for settlement of three different partnerships consisting of different partners. But Limitation offers no bar to a Court instituting an enquiry into the financial relations of the partners inter se at the commencement of the partnership which the Court is engaged in winding up and for this purpose, it may be necessary to go into the accounts of a previous partnership between the parties. Thus where a partner is neither seeking any relief against the heirs of a deceased partner, nor does he ask for accounts of partnerships dissolved by their deaths being taken for the purpose or making their heirs liable, but is only asking for dissolution and settlement of accounts of the partnership, the statute of limitation is no bar. Betjemann v. Betjemann, (1895) 2 Ch. 474 and 3 S. —Art. 109—Starting point.

Even where a claim to mesne profits is in dispute the starting point for a suit for mesne profits would be the date when the profits are received. The limitation cannot start instead from the date of an adjudication of the rights between the parties. In such cases the practice is for the plaintiff to institute a suit for mesne profits before the time expires and let it be stayed pending the disposal of the former litigation. —Art. 110—Fraud.

——N brought a suit for rent against M and got an ex parte decree. In execution, he purchased the entire holding, subsequently the decree was set aside on the ground that the summons had been fraudulently suppressed. N then brought a suit for recovery of rents from M since the date of sale. It was contended by N that although the claim for rent for more than 3 years before institution of suit was barred by limitation, he could not sue M for rent because of his purchase and hence his claim for rent from the date of the purchase onward could not be barred by limitation as cause of action arose after the ex parte decree and the sale in N's favour were set aside.

Held, that N could not take advantage of his own fraud and since the cause of action was not suspended N's claim for rent for more than 3 years before institution of suit was barred by limitation. 3 Cal. 817; 23 Cal. 205, Foll.; 12 M. —Art. 110—Starting point.

——Landlord and tenant the same person.

When there is no one competent to sue, there can be no cause of action, and consequently limitation cannot run, because there is no one against whom it can run. Although under Art. 110 the time from which period begins to run is "when the arrears become due", that is usually the end of each Fasli year, but a quite different time may in certain circumstances be the time from which limitation begins to run.

Where the landlord and tenant were the same person till plaintiff was appointed a Receiver of the landlord's interest, the arrears became due as soon as there was some one to whom they were payable, who was capable of enforcing the obligation by suit. In such a case arrears for more than three years can be had. 12 M. I. A. 244 and 27 Mad. 143, Foll. (Phillips and Devadoss, JJ.). between the prices of the properties which fell to the share of the two contesting parties a certain sum was to be paid by D. to B. The amount was to be paid after one month. B brought a suit to recover the amount. D contended that the suit was the time barred according to Art. 111.

Held, that it was not a case of sale and amount in suit could not be described as purchase-money. Therefore Art. 111 did not apply but the case was governed by Art. 120. (Jai Lal, J.). GURDAS MAL v. BAIJ NATH. 111 I.C. 29=A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 662.

Thereupon the creditor sued the vendor, attached and purchased this debt due from the vendee. He then sued the vendee to recover the debt from him basing his claim on the debt purchased by him,

Held, that by his purchase of the debt the creditor stepped into the shoes of the vendor and obtained his right to recover the debt on account of breach of contract to pay the same to the creditor as agreed in the sale-deed. His suit therefore would be governed by Art. 116 and not by Art. 111, although he based it on the debt purchased by him. 34 All. 459, Foll. (Bhide, J.). ———A member of a company in liquidation is liable to official liquidators in respect of unpaid calls even though as against the company the realization of such calls may have become barred by limitation. 38 All. 347, Foll.

Liquidation gives the official liquidators a cause of action which the company may not itself have possessed. Just as a claim, if brought by the company, might be held to be barred by limitation, but not, if brought by the official liquidators, in the same manner a claim which might be held to be barred by the C. G purchased certain land in auction from Government, and deposited the earnest money. As he had no money to pay the remaining instalments, he sold the land to D who was to pay the remaining instalments. G agreed that when he would acquire full proprietary rights in the land, he would execute a sale-deed in favour of D. D also could not pay all the instalments and transferred his rights to L and agreed to transfer the land to L after G transferred the same to him. The remaining instalments were paid by L, and G got the full proprietary rights on 18th June, 1920 and L brought a suit for specific performance on 19th July, 1924, LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 113—Redemption of mortgage.

Held, that under the Punjab Colonization Act G did not get full proprietary rights as a matter of course from the payment of the last instalment, and the first portion of Art. 113 had no application. The second portion of Art. 113 therefore applied, and time began to run when L had notice that the performance of the agreement had been refused. 41 Mad. 18, Ref. (Tek Chand and Agha Haidar, JJ.). —Art. 113—Compromise deed.

———A Compromise deed stated that the parties had agreed to exchange certain properties but that the exchange would take place on a future date. The suit was brought to enforce the terms of the compromise,

Held, the suit was therefore for specific performance of a contract to hand over the ownership-rights in the property and not for possession of property in which ownership right had completely passed by the compromise. Held, that though the clause as to forfeiture should, under the law in force prior to the T. P. GOVIND NARAYAN v. RANGNATH. 54 Bom. 226=32 Bom. L.R. 232.

—Art. 115—Articles supplied and work done.

——Compensation.

The word "compensation" in Art. 115 as well as in Art. 116 has the same meaning as it has in S. 73 of the Indian Contract Act, and denotes a sum of money payable to a person on account of the loss or damage caused to him by the breach of a contract. A suit therefore to recover a specified sum of money on a contract is a suit for compensation within Art. 115.

Where the plaint, in a suit for the recovery of a certain sum of money alleged to be due to the plaintiff for material supplied and work done, makes no mention of the price of the materials as distinct from the price of the work, and contains no reference whatsoever to two claims and there is only one indivisible claim, and that is for the balance of the money due to the plaintiff on the basis of a contract,

Held, the claim as laid in the plaint is an indivisible one; it cannot be split up into two portions. It must, therefore, be held that it falls neither under Art. 52 nor under Art. 56 but is governed by Art. 115. (Shadi Lal, C. J., Chevis and Harrison, JJ.). ——Suit against director for misfeasance.

Article 115 of the Limitation Act will not apply where part of the contract was in writing registered, i.e., contained in the articles of association. Article 115 is not strictly applicable to a misfeasance in the nature of a breach of trust, nor is Art. 116, as "breach of contract" is not the sole liability sued on nor is it the usual nomenclature for a breach of trust whether specific or quasi. ——Call after forfeiture.

Article 28 of Table A imposes, on forfeiture, a new obligation or a new debt, and as the share-holder thenceforth ceases to be a member of the company, his liability to pay future calls is gone, and all that is left is this new liability to pay the company "all moneys which at the date of forfeiture were presently payable by him to the company in respect of the shares." Such a person is liable with regard to unpaid calls, not as a contributory, either as a present or a past member of the company, but as a debtor to the company. This gives the company a fresh cause of action and the period of limitation for a suit to enforce this new obligation begins to run from the time the shares are forfeited and the proper article applicable is Art. 115, Limitation Act. One of the company articles provided that any member, whose shares might be forfeited would notwithstanding be liable to pay all calls and instalments owing at the time of forfeiture. The defendant a share-holder did not pay calls and therefore his shares were forfeited and the company filed a suit to recover according to the article,

Held, that the article in question embodied a special contract, the cause of action arose when the company forfeited the shares, and, therefore the suit to recover what was due from the defendant on his shares was within time, if filed within 3 years of the date of forfeiture. (Macleod, C.J.

—Art. 115—Compensation and damages.

——Meaning of.

The expression compensation is not ordinarily used as an equivalent to damages, although compensation may often have to be measured by the same rule as damages in an action for a breach. The term compensation signifies that which is given in recompense, an equivalent rendered; damages, on the other hand, constitute the sum of money claimed or adjudged to be paid in compensation for loss or injury sustained, the value estimated in money, of something lost or withheld. The term compensation etymologically suggests the image of balancing one thing against another. Its primary signification is equivalence, and the secondary and more common meaning is something given or obtained as an equivalent. (Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ.). —Art. 115—Contract for sale.

——Contract becoming impossible—Limitation Act, Arts. 60 and 115.

In a certain contract for the sale of property the vendor was to satisfy certain conditions before completion of the contract, but no time was specified for it. The vendor mortgaged the property to another and afterwards it was sold in satisfaction of that mortgage. The purchaser then sued for recovery of deposit money.

Held, that the purchaser need not have sued within a reasonable time. It was Art. 97 and not 60 nor 115, that governed such a case, and time was to be counted since when the property was sold in satisfaction of the mortgage, because it was then that the contract, having become impossible of performance, ended. A purchased from B by an Indenture certain property subject to an incumbrance of Rs. 16,000 by a deed of charge of mortgage in favour of K. There was a stipulation that B would keep A harmless and would indemnify him in respect of any charge save and except the charge in favour of K. Eventually after the sale was completed, it was found that the amount due to the mortgagee was Rs. 21,000. This amount A had to pay and he sued B for the difference between Rs. 16,000 and the sum he actually paid,

Held, that A took the property subject to the liability of the mortgage of K, that on a construction of the document, he was bound to discharge the incumbrance of K entirely and not merely to pay the sum mentioned in it, and in absence of any express covenant to the effect that B would be bound to pay any excess due on the mortgage: A was not entitled to the amount claimed by him,

—Art. 116—Breach of contract.

——Undertaking to pay debt.

Article 116 applies not only to a suit for a specified sum of money due on a registered bond but also to a suit where the vendee having agreed to apply a portion of the purchase-money to the payment of a previous debt due by the vendor fails to apply it in that way and a suit is brought to recover that amount from him. Such a suit is not barred if it is brought within six years of the breach of contract sued upon. The period of limitation in such a case does not run from the date of the execution of the sale-deed but from the date on which the contract is deemed to have been broken, viz., the date when either there was a repudiation of the liability under it or when the contract had been impossible of performance on account of vendor's debt having been satisfied. 34 All. 429; 6 C.L.J. 398 and A.I.R. 1921 All. 183, Rel. on; 3 All. 600 (F.B.); A. The vendee did not pay whereupon the creditor, suing the vendor, attached and purchased this debt due from the vendee. He then sued the vendee to recover the debt from him basing his claim on the debt purchased by him in the execution proceedings.

Held, that by his purchase of the debt the creditor stepped into the shoes of the vendor and obtained his right to recover the debt on account of breach of contract to pay the same to the creditor as stipulated in the registered deed of sale. Per Spencer, J.—Lessee or purchaser who gets possession on the strength of a registered contract and is subsequently evicted for want of title in his lessor or vendor has six years from the date of his dispossession under Art. 116 to sue for damages for breach of the title for quiet enjoyment; but if from the inception the vendor had no title to convey and the vendee never gets possession, the starting point of limitation is the date of the sale. Suit by A as vendee of B who was himself vendee of C against C for money paid which C was bound to pay to his secured creditors is not one for damages or for return of the purchase-money, as there is no privity of contract between the parties. ——The provision in a sale-deed by which the vendor undertook, in case of dispute, to settle it out of his own expense and carry out the sale without obstruction, amounts to a covenant for quiet enjoyment or at least a covenant for title and a breach of the covenant gives the plaintiff six years to sue from the date when the covenant is broken. ——Breach of—Subsequent dispossession.

Plaintiffs brought land under a registered-deed and were put in possession. The land was leased to a tenant who subsequently set up his own title to the land and his claim was also embodied in a final decree of the Court. Plaintiffs then filed a suit against their vendor for the recovery of the purchase money, etc.,

Held, that Art. 116 and not 97 applied and time began to run only when the tenant obtained the decree supporting his own title to the land.

A distinction should be made between cases where from the inception the vendor had no title to convey and the vendee has not been put in possession of the property, and other cases where the sale is only voidable on the objection of third parties and possession is taken under the sale. It is only in the first class of cases that the starting point of limitation will be the date of sale. Case-

———'Compensation.'

The expression compensation is not ordinarily used as an equivalent to damages, although compensation may often have to be measured by the same rule as damages in an action for a breach. The term compensation signifies that which is given in recompense, an equivalent rendered; damages, on the other hand, constitute the sum of money claimed or adjudged to be paid in compensation for loss or injury sustained, the value estimated in money, of something lost or withheld. The term compensation etymologically suggests the image of balancing one thing against another. Its primary signification is equivalence, and the secondary and more common meaning is something given or obtained as an equivalent. (Mookerjee and Rankin, JJ.). MD. MOZAHARAL AHMAD v. MD. on the bond was not barred. It accordingly granted the plaintiff a simple money-decree. The lower Appellate Court holding that the personal remedy also was barred, dismissed the whole suit,

Held, although the relief for recovery of money otherwise than by enforcing the charge would be governed by another article with a different period fixed, yet as the bond was not a single bond within the meaning of Art. 66, the time began to run against the mortgagee for both the reliefs claimed from the date of the first default, when the money became payable. 19 A. ———What is not.

A stipulation for the recovery of the consideration if the usufructuary mortgagee should fail to get possession or be dispossessed is not a personal covenant in the bond or under S. 68 (c) of the Transfer of Property Act by reason of the mortgagor's failure to deliver or secure the possession of the property but is to enforce the charge upon the immovable property under the covenants in the bond itself. Such a suit is governed by Art. 132 of the Limitation Act.

A claim for interest in such a suit is not a claim for damages and Art. 132 and not Art. 116 applies to such a claim. But where the claim is interest at enhanced rate covenanted for in case of dispossession, Art. 116 applies. (Jwala Prasad and Ross, JJ.). JAINANDAN PRASHAD v. BAIJNATH SARAN.

——A one of the widows of one K deceased, executed a release deed in favour of B and A and B together executed a sale-deed and a mortgagee deed in favour of C. The plaintiffs, the reversioners of K instituted suits to declare that the release, the mortgage and the sale were not binding upon them. The plea of B was that he was adopted son of K and that the suits were barred by limitation, as being brought six years after the alleged adoption. It was found that soon after K's death there were disputes between B on the one side and the two widows of K on the other as to the lands of K. The two widows contended that B was not the adopted son of their husband and that the pattah should be transferrred to their names and not in the name of B. Then orders were issued and B was asked to establish his right to the lands within three months from that date as otherwise pattah would be issued to the widows, more than seven years passed ; but no such suit was filed by B and pattas were actually issued to the widows of K.

Held, that under the circumstances the plaintiffs were justified in absolutely ignoring the position of B as the adopted son of K and instituting

Had the plaintiff been suing for possession on the ground that he was the reversioner of B and had he further alleged that the adoption of B was invalid under the Hindu Law, Art. 118 would not have been applicable and the plaintiff would have had twelve years within which to sue. ——The particular limitation prescribed in Art. 118 applies to suits falling under Sp. Rel. Act, S. 42, Ill. (f). The date from which time begins to run is a subjective or personal date; and the condition of obtaining the particular relief which is sought in a declaratory suit is that the plaintiff should not be guilty of laches, the measure of laches being fixed by the statute as six years. But if a claimant chooses to run the risk that an adoption which he has not attacked will have every presumption made in its favour by reason of its long standing, he can wait till his reversionary right has accrued and even till the limit of 12 years from the accruer has passed. In such case the article applicable is 141 and not 118.

Plaintiff was cousin to the former owner of the suit property by name D. D married M. Plaintiff averred that after D's death in the year 1880, M adopted N, who was her daughter's son; that N married B and died himself in 1895, that upon his death B took the ordinary Hindu woman's estate and died in 1903, and that upon her death, plaintiff's title accrued, and he brought his suit for possession on 1st July, 1912. Defendant admitted some show of adoption of N but denied that it was legal or valid; and he set up his own adoption by M in 1901,

Held, the adoption of the defendant was void, and the plaintiff was entitled to brush it aside and sue for possession within 12 years from the death of the widow. 24 Bom. 260, Not appr.; 33 I.A. 156, Affirmed; 30 Mad. 309, Appr.; 39 I.A. 19, Cons; 37 Bom. 513, Not appr.; 34 I.A. 87, Foll. (Lord Phillimore.) KALYANDAPPA v. CHANBASAPPA. 79 I.C. 971=11 O.L.J. 181=28 C.W.N. 666=22 A.L.J. 508=26 Bom. ——Where there is no question of breach of contract or compensation payable for such breach, but parties were to look into the accounts of each other to equalize the profit, each trading independently of other, and a suit is brought to take such an account and ascertain who owes whom, and give a decree for the amount payable,

Held, that the suit cannot be treated as a suit for compensation and it does not fall under Art. 115. The general Art. 120 would, therefore, apply. 11 C.L.J. 43 and 14 C.W.N. 122, Not foll. (Krishnan and Odgers, JJ.). RAOHAPUDI BHAVNARAYANA v. KOLLA VENKAYYA. A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 775.

——Claim founded on decree.

Per Spencer, Offg.C.J.—Article 120 is the proper article, for suits to enforce obligations, arising out of decrees. But the fact must not be lost sight of that Art. 120 is a residuary article and can only be applied when no other article is found suitable. Hence, where the claim is founded on a decree on a compromise, unless it is shown that Art. 64 will not apply to the claim, as set out in the plaint, the plaintiff cannot get six years, under Art. 120.

Per Srinivasa Aiyangar, J.—Though the claim may be for accounts, yet where the claim has merged in a compromise decree, Art. 64 cannot apply because it is an article for the recovery of the money, on accounts stated between the parties and Art. 115 cannot apply, because the suit is not merely on a contract between the parties. In the absence of any other appropriate article to be applied to such a suit the proper article to be applied is Art. 120. 27 Mad. 243, Foll. (Spencer, Offg. C.J. and Srinivasa Ayyangar, J.). The case does not come under S. 209 of the Contract Act or Art. 120 as there is no question in it of suing the defendant for any act done by him after the death of his late principal which he might have done as a trustee. ——Duty to account incidental to management.

Article 62 does not apply to transactions, in which the defendant is not under a mere duty to hand over the money which he received, but has other duties as well in respect of it. Where, therefore, under a partition deed it was arranged that the senior co-parcener and the minor should enjoy their share of the property jointly and as manager it was the duty of the senior co-parcener not merely to account for the money received, but to pay the kist and the other expenses as well, as to maintain the minor,

A suit by a junior member of a family governed by rule of primogeniture for a plot of land in lieu of maintenance on the strength of family custom is governed either by Art. 120 or 144, the choice between the two provisions of law depending upon the question whether the suit is treated as one for declaration or for possession. ———Suit for declaration of title to land—Limitation—Denial of title in the written statement—Effect.

A suit for declaration must be brought within six years of the cause of action unless there has been a fresh invasion of the plaintiff's right giving him a fresh cause of action. The fact that in the written statement the defendant denies the title of the plaintiff does not give rise to a fresh cause of action. (Dalal, J.). KALLU SHAH v. MAHOMED EHSANULLAH. 115 I.C. 629 (All.).

———Partition.

For a declaratory suit challenging the title of defendant co sharer under partition, the cause of action arises for the first time, the revenue officer sanctions the mode of partition. The mere fact that the partition proceedings are held up by litigation does not mean that, when the Revenue Officer proceeded finally to carry out what he had decided to carry out there is a fresh cause of action. Nor does the rejection of a fresh application to Revenue Officer give a new cause of action. 79 P. R. 1917, Foll. (Zafar Ali and Dalip Singh, JJ.). CHANKANDA RAM v. HAKAM KHAN.

———If a plaintiff is in possession or enjoyment of the property in suit he is not obliged to sue for a declaration of title on the first or each succeeding denial of his title by the defendant. He may look upon each denial with complacency or at his option may institute a suit to falsify the assertions of the other side. But when he finds that his rights are being actually jeopardized by the action or assertion of the defendant, then he must take proceedings within six years from the date of such actions or assertions. ———In a suit for declaration of title based on the defendant's denial of the same limitation runs from the date of the first denial. ———Notice of ejectment.

Defendant issued a notice of ejectment in 1912 to the plaintiff. Plaintiff brought a suit in the Revenue Court to contest the notice but was defeated. Thereupon proceedings in execution of the notice took place; but the proceedings were purely formal, and in fact the plaintiff retained physical possession of the land in suit. A further notice of ejectment was issued against him.

Held, that the fresh notice constituted a fresh invasion of his title, and therefore limitation against him for his suit for declaration of his title began to run from the date of the fresh notice. ———Where the plaintiffs who are in possession bring a declaratory suit that they have a raiyati right and not under-raiyati rights, either of the events namely a decision of the dispute during the preparation of the Record-of-Rights or the final publication of the Record-of-Rights would give them a cause of action. ———Ejectment order.

Limitation for a suit for a declaration that the plaintiff is an under-proprietor runs from the ejectment order and not from decree in rent suit against, him, on the ground that he was a tenant, especially when he is in possession in spite of the decree and order. Where the defendant's denial of plaintiff's title in 1895 gave him a cause of action to sue for a declaration, but he remained in joint possession of the undivided portion of the shamilat and his enjoyment thereof was not interfered with,

Held, when fresh proceedings for partition began and the defendant again denied plaintiff's title to a share, there was a fresh invasion of the plaintiff's title which gave him a fresh cause of action

——Overt act of interference.

In a suit for declaration that certain lands were a grave-yard it was found that portions of the land were, from time to time cultivated, that in the settlement of 1904-1905 no part of the land was shown as a grave-yard, a portion being entered as cultivated and the rest as waste. In 1915 there was an active interference when certain masons who entered upon the land in order to repair the old tombs were obstructed,

Held, that the suit was in time, being brought within 6 years after 1915. The plaintiffs might very well have disregarded the fact that parts of the land were cultivated so long as their rights were not actively interfered with. The obstruction of repairs to the tomb was an overt act which interfered with the plaintiff's right of user. Therefore time did not begin to run against the plaintiffs until 1915. ——A mere entry of names in the khewat does not debar the person, against whom the entry is made, for all time to come from suing for a declaration, if once six years are allowed to expire. Any fresh act which can amount to a fresh invasion of the owner's right or a fresh attempt to cast a cloud on his title would create a new cause of action in his favour, and his suit for declaration cannot be dismissed on the mere ground that the cause of action first accrued more than six years ago when an adverse entry was made against him. —Art. 120—Declaratory suit—Setting aside alienation.

———Vendee never in possession.

Where a suit was brought by certain Hindus for setting aside a sale-deed executed by their father and where the property was in the possession of the mortgagee even at the time of the institution of the suit and the vendee had never obtained possession, the suit is to be regarded as merely a declaratory suit, and Art. 120 and not 126 applies for alienee did not get possession. ———By grand-mother.

Daughter's sons are under Hindu Law not entitled to succeed in the lifetime of their mother and, therefore, are not the immediate reversioners of their grand-mother. Their suit for declaration that an alienation by their grandmother is not binding on them is governed by Art. 120. 15 P.R. 1916, Ref. (Tek Chand, J.). MT. BAL KAUR v. MT. ———Of temple property.

Where, in a suit for declaration that a mortgage of temple property executed by the defendant representing the property to be his was not binding on the plaintiff, who represented the worshippers of a temple, the plaint alleged a breach of trust which consisted in the defendant dealing with properties, as his own, which really belonged to the temple,

Held, that the suit was governed by Art. 120 and that there was an allegation of fraud and time began to run from the time the plaintiff came to know of the fraud 33 Mad. 31, Dist. and 7 L.W. 280, Rel. on. (Phillips and Odgers, JJ.). VISWANADHAM v. NARAYANA DASS.

———Alienee never in possession.

Article 126 is based upon the principle that a son's knowledge of alienation by his father ordinarily arises when he sees the alienee in possession. In cases where the alienee never gets possession no limitation can arise under Art. 126. In such cases, the right of the son will amount merely to obtaining a declaration that the deed is invalid. The limitation prescribed for such a suit is under Art. 120. 41 Mad. 650, Rel. on. (Ashworth and Iqbal Ahmad, JJ.). LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 120—Declaratory suit—Setting aside sale.

———Of temple property.

The temple lands in possession of the temple servants were recorded in the Sanad under Summary Settlements Act, S. 7 as their private lands (Jat-inam) and one of the servants alienated some portion of the lands in 1903 but the vendee did not take possession till 1916. Plaintiff sued on behalf of the managing Committee of Gaukars for a declaration that the lands belonged to the Devasthan,

Held, the cause of action arose within the meaning of Art. 120 only when the defendant attempted to alienate the lands and not by the mere grant of the Sanad. But the article did not apply in the case as plaintiff claimed possession. (Shah, Ag. C.J. and Crump, J.). VITHAL DHONDJI DEVLI v. SURYAJI RAMCHANDRA NAIK. 75 I.C. 617=24 Bom. ——Right to emerged land.

This land in suit had emerged out of the river Ganges which lay to the north of the village of Dhanapur of which the defendants were the owners. To the west of it, was a village called Arazi Dayara Dhanapur of which the plaintiffs were the mortgagees. The plaintiffs sued for a declaration that they were the owners of the village Arazi Dayara Dhanapur; that the land in suit had accreted to that village and therefore formed an accession to the village, it was found that the plaintiffs were only mortgagees of village, that in spite of objections by the plaintiffs the village had been settled only with the defendants, by the Revenue authorities, and that the plaintiffs were never in possession of the lands at any time,

Held, that there was no law under which the land could be regarded as an accession to the village Jrazi Dayara and that the suit having been brought more than six years after the cause of action for the declaration arose, was barred by time. —Art. 120—Dissolution of marriage.

——The cause of action or a suit for restitution of conjugal rights is founded on a breach of the contract of marriage and the breach continues so long as the person of the wife is withheld from the husband and he is denied the undoubted legal right of her conjugal society. This view of the cause of action in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights places it within the purview of S. 28,

Held, that it was not a suit for possession at all and that Art. 144 could not apply and that if the defendant's action had perverted the property to a purpose for which he had no right to use it, the claim fell within Art. 32 but that in any event 120 only applied both as regards the relief for demolition of construction and for injunction. Held, that the suit was essentially a suit for the issue of an injunction and although the injunction would have had the effect of restoring the courtyard to a state in which the plaintiffs might have been able to have a more extensive use of it than they actually had, the suit would not be covered by Art. 144 but Art. 120 would apply. ——Sale of patni in a rent-decree—Surplus withdrawn by a creditor of one patnidar—Sale subsequently set aside—Zamindar made to pay whole purchase-money—Suit by zamindar.

Certain patni was sold for arrears of rent and was purchased by a third party. The zamindars took out their dues from the purchase-money and the balance remained in deposit. A decree-holder against one of the patnidars attached the surplus sale proceeds and realized his dues in full under that attachment. Some of the darpatnidars, subsequently brought a suit to have the patni sale set aside. The suit was decreed and the zamindars had to refund to the auction-purchaser the amount which the auction purchaser had paid for the patni at the putni auction. Thereafter, a suit was brought by the zamindars against the decree-holder to recover with interest Rs. 161 which he had withdrawn by attachment under the money decree, Held, that the decree-holder was liable to refund the amount and as the decree-holder, when he took the money or the Court when it handed over to him the money, did not intend the money to be for the use of the zamindars, Art. 62 did not apply but the residuary Art. 120 would apply. ——In cases in which the relief is sought on the ground of fraud, misconduct, mistake, etc., it would appear that limitation is made to commence from the time when the fraud, misconduct or mistake becomes known to the plaintiff. Article 120 being an omnibus one, the general expression employed in Col. 3, is necessitated by a variety of suits not specifically provided for coming within its purview, in some of which there would be fraud, misconduct, or mistake as part of the cause of action, but in the rest that element would be absent. It would thus be in consonance with the scheme of the Act, dealing with suits on a cause of action consisting of fraud, misconduct, etc., if the right to sue should be deemed to accrue under Art. 120, from the time of the plaintiff's knowledge of the same even in respect of suits based on similar grounds coming under that article. 7 L.W. 280; 38 Mad. 67 and A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 897, Rel. on; 33 Mad. 31; 38 Mad. 1064, Dist. (Wallace and

A similar interpretation must be given to the words "payable" and "deliverable" as used in Art. 123 and a share in the property of an intestate would not be deliverable until the administrator, to whom letters of administration had been granted had in his hands the share to be delivered and, similarly, a legacy or share in a legacy does not become payable until the executor or other person liable to pay it has in his hands money with which it could be paid.

adoption was challenged by the natural mother and the matter was before the Courts. The estate was under the management of the Court of Wards, and later, of Court Receivers, Held, that no one could have had in his possession or control any fund representing the income of the estate, which the natural mother (the testatrix) had a right to enjoy for her own use but had not received until it had been finally decided by the Courts that the adoption of the propositus by the rival claimant was invalid, and that therefore, for suits to obtain payment of the legacies under the will, time began to run only from the date of the decision of the Privy Council. V, mother of N, after his death brought a suit for possession of his property. Pending the suit she died in 1899, but the suit was continued by defendants. By her will she had bequeathed her certain legacies which were to be paid out of the accumulation of the estate. The property was in the possession of a Court of Wards and the income was accumulating. During the pendency of the suit the accumulated income was in 1905 permitted by the Court to be divided among defendants and P, who claimed adversely to F. They all undertook that the money would be brought in if the Court so ordered. The suit was decreed in favour of V, in 1913. Defendants by the decree alone became entitled to the estate. The one-third of the income which had been handed over to P, was therefore ordered to be refunded to defendants in 1915 and was refunded in 1917. The legatees within 3 years of this brought a suit against defendants 3 years of this for the payment of legacies, and the defendants contended that the suit was time-barred as it was brought after more than 12 years from 1905.

Held, the defendants did not receive any money which could be considered as available for the legacies until 1915 and, further, as regards that part which they received from P and which was to satisfy these claims, they did not receive it until 1917; therefore, time under the statutes of limitation does not begin to run until there are available assets.

—Art. 124—Applicability.

——The nature of the suit intended to be covered by Art. 124 must be a suit filed by a plaintiff who claims the office from a person who at that time holds the office himself. Where the plaintiff has not alleged that the office is now being held adversely to him by any other person, the suit is only against the trustee of the Devasthanam for the recovery of the emoluments. incidentally it may be for a declaration that his title to the office was denied. Article 124, therefore does not apply. (Srinivasa Iyengar and Curgenven, JJ.). THATHACHARIAR v. SINGARACHARIAR. 109 I C. 771=A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 377.

——Succession by nomination of successor is not hereditary.

Where succession to a religious office is by nomination by the holder in office of his successor it is not a hereditary succession by Art. 124. Hereditary succession is succession by the heir to the deceased under the law the office must be transmitted to the successor according to some definite rules of descent which by their own force designate the person to succeed. There need be no blood relationship between the deceased and his successor but the right of the latter should not depend upon the choice of any individual. Therefore the only article applicable to cases of succession after nomination is Art. 120, Art. 144 also is not applicable as the claim to possession is also barred if the claim to office is barred under Art. 120. Where a mortgagor sells in reality a moiety of the properties to the mortgagees for an amount due on the mortgage, and the other moiety is ostensibly sold in the name of the wife for an alleged consideration, the transaction amounts to a sale of an unrecognised portion of a bhag, and if subsequently after the death of her husband, the wife sells her moiety to the mortgagee the subsequent deed of sale cannot be upheld as in effect causing a past dismembered bhag to be re-united, and a suit by reversioner to set aside the above alienation is not governed by Arts. 125, 126 and 141. ——Starting point.

For the purpose of Art. 125, land must be taken to include interest in land. Suits referred to in Art. 125 also include suits in respect of mortgages. A mere decree for sale of the mortgaged property cannot be an alienation. In the absence of fraud, limitation against a suit under Art. 125, commences from the date of the alienation and not from the date when the plaintiffs came to know of it. If a —Art. 125—Starting point.

———The reversioner of a Hindu widow sued for a declaration that a mortgage by the widow and a Court sale in execution of a decree on the mortgage were not operative after the death of the widow so as to be binding on the reversioner,

Held, that limitation ran from the date of the mortgage and not that of the Court sale,

Held, also that to say that the suit is barred or not according as the prayer is for a declaration that the mortgage or sale is not binding is to allow a quibble with words.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 128—Scope.

—Art. 126—Alienee not in possession.

———Article 126 contemplates the case of an alienation where the alienee has taken possession of the property, because limitation only runs from the date when the alienee so takes possession. It is only when such possession has been taken that any cause of action accrues to the plaintiff, so far as Art. 126 is concerned. Son's knowledge of alienation by his father ordinarily arises when he sees the alienee in possession; in case where the alienee never gets possession, no limitation can arise under Art. 126; and in such cases the only right of the son will be to obtain a declaration that the deed is invalid and the limitation prescribed by such a suit is that of six years under Art. 120. —Art. 127—'Exclusion.'

——There is no definition of the word "exclusion," in the Limitation Act and the question whether a person has been excluded from joint family, must depend upon the facts of the particular case. An intention to exclude is an essential element. It is necessary therefore, for the Court to be satisfied that there was an intention on the part of those in control and possession of the joint family property to exclude the person and that exclusion was to his knowledge.

——If exclusion means mere physical exclusion the receipt of maintenance and holding of land out of the estate must prevent its being held that there was exclusion. But in "exclusion" under Art. 127 of the Act, just as in "possession" there is a mental as well as a physical element. Legal or juridical exclusion from an estate by one co-owner of his co-owners is consistent with their physical admission to it. For such mere physical admission to put an end to exclusion it must be possible to infer that it was accompanied by an intention to abandon the position of a right to exclude. No doubt such intention will be inferred where no legal title to exclude is proved to have been set up and maintained, because there is al-

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 128—Agreement.

———Onus.

In a suit by a Hindu for a declaration of his title to a one half share in certain property, it was common ground between the parties that there was no joint family on the date of the suit. It was also admitted by both parties that for the last eight or nine years they had been living and messing separately. According to the plaintiff every joint family property had been divided between them except the property in dispute. Bar of limitation was pleaded in defence.

Held, that the onus lay on the plaintiff to prove the point of time at which the status of the joint family broke and that the alleged partition by which his one half-share to the property was determined did take place within twelve years immediately preceding the institution of the suit. ———Where certain money bonds remained joint property even after the partition in a Hindu joint family and one of them was realised by the defendants who were some of the separated members, five years before the plaintiffs, the other members filed a suit for their share of the money realised,

Held, that Art. 62 and not Art. 127 applied as the latter does not apply to a family which has separated prior to the suit and that the suit was barred by limitation. (Kanhaiya Lal, J.). BHAGWAN DAS v. SUKHDEO KORIE. 75 I.C. 953= A.I.R. 1924 All. 812.

—Art. 129—Land in lieu of maintenance.

——A suit by a junior member of a family governed by rule of primogeniture for a plot of land in lieu of maintenance on the strength of family custom is governed either by Art. 120 or 144, the choice between the two provisions of law depending upon the question whether the suit is treated as one for declaration or for possession. Therefore when on the evidence it is proved that the defendant has been giving grain to the plaintiffs by way of maintenance and that the allowance was stopped two years before the suit, the suit is clearly in time.

Articles 129 and 131 do not apply to such a case as Art. 129 is restricted in its operation to a suit for maintenance in which the right is based on Hindu Law and not upon custom and Art. 131 is confined to a suit in which the plaintiff seeks simply to establish his right to maintenance and does not ask for a consequential relief. 83 P.R. 1906, Foll. (Shadi Lal, C.J. and Hilton, J.). ——If the tenant is in adverse possession of the absolute interest for over twelve years, the landlord's right is completely extinguished. If the tenant is in adverse possession for such a period in respect only of a limited interest as tenant, then whatever may be the effect of it on the question of the landlord's right to khas possession a claim for assessment of rent will not be barred unless as provided for in Art. 130 or Art. 131. the landlord's right to have the rent assessed and to recover the rent from his tenant. The right to levy assessment upon rent free lands is governed by Art. 130 and is consequently extinguished under S. 28, if no suit to enforce the right is instituted within the time allowed. On the other hand under Art. 131, the right to levy assessment would, as recurring right, accrue when there has been a demand and refusal, only in those cases where the relationship of landlord and tenant or landlord and occupant had ever existed. Once that right is established then the non-payment of rent or assessment would not be sufficient to enable the tenant to begin to set up a title by adverse possession. There must be some overt act such as a refusal to pay the rent or assessment before the time begins to run. This is in harmony with the view that where a tenant claimed land rent free to the knowledge of the plaintiff and no suit for resumption or assessment was brought till after the expiry of 12 years; the suit was barred by limitation under Art. 130. (Mookerjee and Chotzner, JJ.). AKBAR SARCAR v. RAMESH CHANDRA MAITRA. 72 I.C. 329=38 C.L.J. 207=A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 392.

—Art. 131—Assessment of rent.

If an Inamdar continues to receive per annum certain fixed rent from his tenants for a particular survey number and has made no demand for the actual assessment in excess of amount which the tenants have to pay, that fact would not debar him from claiming assessment if he chose to do so, but once he claims assessment and the right to claim assessment is denied by the tenant limitation begins to run against the Inamdar, and the fact that a fresh survey rate is introduced subsequently would not create a new right in the inamdar to recover that particular rate of assessment from the tenant. ——Demand and refusal.

A suit to establish a right to assessment of rent is governed by Art. 131. A suit for enhancement brought more than six years after the date of the final publication of the Record of Rights, in which the defendants are entered as raiyats at fixed rates, is not barred by limitation, as such Record-of-Rights does not create or extinguish any rights. ———Recurring right—Right to maintenance and a right to recover maintenance—Distinction.

A right of maintenance is a right which accrues on the happening of a certain event and is not a recurring right but a constant right till the happening of some other event which determines it. No doubt the right to recover maintenance is a recurring right unless maintenance is fixed by the parties at one consolidated sum, but there is a great difference between a suit to establish maintenance and a suit to recover arrears of maintenance, and even if it be held that Art. 131 would govern a suit to establish a right of maintenance, it cannot be held applicable to a suit to recover arrears of maintenance. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 132 — Default clause in mortgage.

——Time from first default.

A mortgage-deed provided for the payment of the mortgage money with interest hereon within seven years, and further contained a stipulation that the interest accruing due for the half-year shall, if not paid up, be added to the principal amount. and that if interest for any six months remained unpaid, the mortgagee shall have power either to bring a suit in respect of the entire mortgage-money and interest without waiting for the expiry of the stipulated period or to wait for the payment of the principal and interest and compound interest till the expiry of the term fixed. It further stated that both the conditions were left entirely to the choice or option of the mortgagee, that the mortgagee had liberty to act in accordance with either of those conditions, that is to say, either to bring a suit in respect of the entire mortgage :money and interest without waiting for the expiry of the stipulated period, or to waive the default and wait for the payment of the principal and interest and compound interest agreed till the expiry of the term fixed. The mortgagor further agreed that if at the stipulated time the money remained unpaid, the mortgage deed shall be treated as a sale-deed, and the mortgage-money as the sale consideration.

Held, that Art. 132 applied and that, despite the authority given by the contract, the operation of the clause which gave an option to the mortgagee for his own benefit could not be waived so as to prevent or postpone the starting of limitation against him. ——Separate causes of action.

The covenant in the mortgage-deed as to repayments was to the effect that the mortgage money with interest would be paid by monthly instalments of not less than Rs. 20 plus interest, the payment being made on the 1st day of November, 1899, and on the first day of every succeeding month, provided that the entire advance together with interest thereon would be fully liquidated within the ten years from the date of the mortgage. It was also agreed that defaults in payment of monthly instalments and interest as agreed should constitute separate causes of action,

Held, by providing that default in the payment of each monthly instalment should constitute a separate cause of action the parties clearly intended that prompt payments should be made and that the period of limitation should run from the date of default unless the payee waived the benefit of the provisions of prompt payment in case of default. Mere forbearance to sue would not stop limitation from beginning to run. (Martineau and Moti Sagar, JJ.). NANAKCHAND v. MIR NOHAMAD KHAN. 75 I.C. 1048= A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 702.

——Time from first default.

The mortgage-deed provided, "in case of non-payment of interest from year to year, the creditor has the option to add the interest to the principal and to charge interest thereon at the aforesaid rate or to recover through Court principal and interest from me and hypothecated property and also from my other movable or immovable property and from my person within the stipulated period. The period fixed shall not bar the claim. In case of non-payment within the stipulated period, the creditor shall have the power to recover the money, principal and interest together with compound interest from me, mortgaged property or other movable or immovable property of mine,"

Held, that as soon as the first default was made a right accrued to the mortgagee to sue for the whole sum with interest. On default having been made the money certainly did become due at once; and the mere circumstance that the creditor had the option of not calling in the money cannot wipe out the fact that the money had in fact become due and that the first default having occurred more than twelve years before the suit, money sued for became due then and the claim for the enforcement of the charge is barred by time under Art. 132, (1842) 4 Q B. 519; 37 All. 400 (F.B.), Foll. (Mears, C.J., Piggott, Walsh, Ryves and Sulaiman, JJ.). ——Time from default.

The mortgagor by a mortgage deed of 17th July, 1901, covenanted to pay the interest year by year and the principal within three years of the date of execution, and in case of default of the payment of the annual interest, he empowered the mortgagee without waiting for the expiration of the period fixed for the payment of the principal, to realise the amount due for the principal and interest from the hypothecated property.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 132 — Default clause in mortgage.

Held, the deed means that the privilege of deferring payment of the principal to the 17th July, 1904 was conditional on the punctual payment of the annual interest. No interest was paid at all, so the cause of action arose, on the 17th July, 1902. Under a mortgage bond it was provided that the loan was to be re-paid within a certain period. If in any year the interest was not paid, the interest might be treated as principal and would carry interest at a certain rate. If there was any default in payment of the sum stipulated to be paid annually, the mortgagee was to have power without waiting for the expiry of the stipulated period to set aside all the other stipulations embodied in the document and to bring a suit in Court to realise the entire principal together with interest and costs from the persons of the mortgagors and from the hypothecated property,

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 134—Mutt and temple property.

If it is a case of out and-out transfer of property whether it is a voluntary sale or a sale in execution, the suit is barred if beyond 12 years from the date of transfer; it is immaterial whether Art. 134 or Art. 144 applies. In the case of temples it does not matter which article is applied; as Art. 144 is only a residuary article one would be right and proper in applying Art. 134, but if Art. 134 does not apply, Art. 144 would apply. In the case of lease of temple property the trustee having beneficial interest he may be still called a trustee and Art. 134 will apply, but if it is a case of a mutt Art. 134 cannot apply and there will certainly be no adverse possession from the date of the lease. ———Suit by trustee to set aside alienation by prior trustee.

Ordinarily trust property belonging to Hindu religious institutions is not vested in the so-called trustee who is not in the position of an express trustee as understood in English Law and, therefore, a suit by trustee to set aside alienation of trust property by previous trustee is not governed by Art. 134 and even if Art. 144 applies, the period of limitation runs not from the date of alienation but from the date of the accession of the plaintiff trustee to his office. 13 Mad. 277, Foll.; A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 243, Not foll. (Phillips, J.). ———Lease without necessity.

The language of S. 10 of the Limitation Act gives the clue to the meaning and the applicability of Art. 134. It clearly shows that the article refers to cases of specific trust, and relates to property "conveyed in trust." Neither under the Hindu Law nor in the Mahomedan system is any property "conveyed," to or vested in a shebait or mutwali, in the case of a dedication. Therefore alienation made by either cannot be treated as an alienation made by a trustee under S. 10. A lease without justification granted by the head of the mutt is valid for his life, and if adopted by his successor would endure during his term of office; but neither the original alienation nor the subsequent adoption would create a bar by adverse possession. Possession of the lessee becomes adverse to the successor only on his accession to the office. (Mr. Ameer Ali.) VIDYA VARUTHI THIRTHA SWAMIGAL v. BALUSWAMI AYYAR. 65 I.C. 161=15 M. Article 134 is limited to cases where the property mortgaged has been transferred by the mortgagee for a valuable consideration. That article applies only to cases where a transferee for value from a mortgagee, takes that which is de facto a mortgage, upon a representation made to him and in the full belief that it is not a mortgage but an absolute title. The article cannot protect persons who are not transferees from the mortgagees, but are transferees from persons other than the mortgagees or their heirs, e.g., transferees from mortgagee's transferees. 20 O. ———Article 134 presupposes a transfer with possession. The transferor-mortgagee must have been in possession of the mortgaged property at the time he made the transfer. But the possession which the transferor has at the time of the transfer need not necessarily be acquired under the mortgage originally made in his favour. Even if the mortgage was a simple mortgage and if the mortgagee subsequently gets possession of the mortgage property otherwise, as for example, by purchase in execution of a simple money decree obtained by another creditor, the article will still apply if it is established that at the time the transfer is made the mortgagee was in possession no matter under what title. ———Transferee with notice—Article not applicable.

Article 134 could be availed of by a transferee from a mortgagee to resist the suit for possession of the property transferred to him but it has nowhere been laid down that the transfer itself conveyed a valid title to the transferee. If it can be shown that the transferee from a mortgagee knew that the title of his transferor was not free from doubt and such transferee took no steps whatever to clear up that doubt, he can hardly claim the benefit of Art. 134. The omission of the words "in good faith" from Art. 134 does not entitle a person who purchases with full knowledge that his vendor's title is merely that of mortgagee, to the benefit of that article. 37 All. 660, Ref. (Broadway, J.). So long as he is in possession, he cannot deny that it was from the lessor that he got the land. But where the tenant holds on after the expiry of the lease, time begins to run against the landlord from the date of the expiry of the lease, under Art. 139 of the Limitation Act. After the expiry of 12 years, the title of the landlord must cease by the application of S. 28 of the Limitation Act. ——A tenancy by sufferance would not by itself make the possession of the holder rightful, so as to prevent limitation from running. But the proposition is subject to one important qualification and that is that if the landlord or the person entitled to resume the tenancy does anything to indicate his assent to the continuance of the tenancy, that would itself be sufficient to convert the tenancy by sufferance into a tenancy from year to year. ——When a tenancy at sufferance has existed for twelve years the landlord's right of entry is barred by statute, and the tenant becomes the absolute and complete owner of the property.

Per Stuart, J.—The defendants cannot be permitted to deny the plaintiff's title. —Art. 140—'Reversioner.'

———The terms "reversioner", etc. in Art. 140 are used in the technical sense of the English Real Property Law. A reversion arises where the grantor grants a particular estate to a person and does not dispose of the remainder. That which is not disposed of resides in the grantor and is called a reversion. It is the interest in land undisposed of which reverts to the grantor after exhaustion of the particular estate; if the fee simple granted is "conditional" or "determinable" what is left in the grantor is not a reversion but "a possibility of reverter". The case of "a possibility of reverter" is clearly not comprehended within the terms of Art. 140. See Halsbury's "Laws of England", Vol. 24, p. 212. ———Article 141 is restricted to suits by plaintiff whose title and right as the heir of the last full owner to sue for possession accrues upon the death of a female holding a woman's qualified estate under the Hindu or Muhammadan Law. To claim the benefit of the article the plaintiff must prove first that there was a qualified estate in the Hindu female and secondly that he was entitled to possession after the death of the female as the heir of the last male holder and further it must be shown that having regard to the existing law the plaintiff was entitled to the possession of the properties in dispute at the date of the suit. (See Rustomji's Limitation Act, 2nd Edition, p. 449). The article makes it clear that the reversioner has 12 years after the death of a Hindu or Mohammadan female to establish his right as heir to the last full owner and it lies upon the party in possession to prove that he has got a better title. —Art. 141—Interpretation.

———"Entitled."

Per *Sulaiman, Ag. C. —Art. 141—Suit alleging wrongful possession.

Where in a suit for possession, the reversioners do not, in the plaint, admit or seek to set aside any alienation made by the deceased Mahomedan widow in favour of the alienee, but simply allege wrongful possession by him, Art. 2 of the Schedule annexed to the Punjab Limitation (Custom) Act (1920) does not govern limitation. —Art. 141—Suit by adopted son.

——The cause of action in the case of an adopted son accrues only from the date of his adoption; when therefore a suit is brought by an adopted son within 12 years of the date of the accrual of the cause of action in his favour, the suit cannot be considered to be barred by limitation. So far as a Hindu widow is concerned she cannot for the purposes of limitation be considered to represent the entire estate, so as to bar a suit of a reversioner when her own suit happens to be barred. This rule would be applicable not only in the case of a Hindu entitled to the possession of the estate after the death of a female, but also to the case of a Mahomedan occupying a similar position. The wording of Art. 141, Act XV, 1877 and of the present Act IX of 1908 make this amply clear. (Case-law discussed.) (Gokaran Nath Misra, J.). ABDUL HALIM KHAN v. SAODAT ALI KHAN. 108 I. If the suit is for possession by a plaintiff who says that while he was in possession of the property he was dispossessed or has gone out of possession, then he must show possession within 12 years. But in every other case in which a plaintiff claims possession of immovable property, it must be a case under Art. 144 because it is a case not otherwise specially provided, and in such a case limitation only begins to run where the defendant's possession becomes adverse. The result of that is that the onus lies on the defendant to plead and prove that his possession became adverse and continued adverse for more than 12 years before the suit. 41 All. 669 and A.I.R. 1916 P.C. 21, Foll. (Walsh and Ashworth, JJ.). ——Suit in ejectment—Dispossession within twelve years—Possession of open sites—Possession will presumably follow possession of property to which they adjoin—Presumption of possession following title.

The plaintiff, who purchased at a Court sale a shop and two open pieces of land in front of it and was placed in possession, sued to eject from the land the defendant who claimed to be a subsequent purchaser from the judgment-debtor, Held, if the plaintiff established his title over the property he can rely upon the presumption that possession went with the title in absence of satisfactory evidence in rebuttal. As under Art. 142 time begins to run from the date of the dispossession; if the plaintiff alleges his dispossession within twelve years of the suit, then the question must arise according to the circumstances of each case how far the plaintiff has correctly fixed the date of dispossession and how far the onus lies on the defendant to show that that date was wrong. In a suit for ejectment it is for the plaintiff to prove possession prior to the dispossession which he alleges. On the question of evidence however, the initial fact of the plaintiff's title comes to his aid. Possession of open sites goes naturally with the possession of the property to which they adjoin. If the defendant asserts his rights, he must show, that he has been in possession adversely against the owner of the property. (Macleod, C J. and Coyajee, J.). ———Burden of proof is on plaintiff—Declaratory decree in favour of plaintiff is not possession.

Plaintiffs, owners of a one-third share in the land in suit, instituted a declaratory suit in respect of that share, founding their cause of action on a denial of their title in partition proceedings. The suit was decreed. Plaintiffs subsequently instituted the suit for the possession of their one-third share. It was alleged in the plaint that after the previous suit had been decreed the plaintiffs had been receiving their share of the produce of the property till about a year before the date of the present suit. The plea of the defendants was adverse possession for more than twelve years.

Held, that in order to succeed it was necessary for the plaintiffs to prove that they have been in possession of the property in suit at some time within 12 years from the institution thereof and that the mere fact that they had obtained a declaratory decree was not sufficient if they had not followed the declaratory decree by any action to make their title perfect by obtaining possession. 45 P.R. 1914 and A.I.R. 1923 P. In execution of his decree A brought to sale and purchased B's undivided 1/3rd share of a house in 1900, and A in 1903 was given formal possession over his 1/3rd joint share. B, notwithstanding this, continued in actual physical possession of the house along with other co-owners. In 1916 A brought a suit for partition against the other co-owners and obtained a decree of the separation of his 1/3rd share, and in 1917 he applied to be placed in actual possession of his separated share. ——Suit for possession based upon title—Art. 144 applies—Difference between Arts. 142 and 144.

The original tenant of a certain grove died leaving no heir. Under the law of the province and village custom, a tenant's grove escheats to the landlord if the tenant has no heir. The plaintiff being a village landlord sued for a declaration that he was the owner and possessor of that grove. The trial Court, regarding the suit as one only for possession, held that the suit fell under Art. 142 and threw the suit on the ground that the plaintiff had not proved possession within twelve years,

Held, that this was not a suit to which Art. 142, Limitation Act, applies, but that the article more strictly applicable was Art. 144. The essential difference between these two articles is that in the first case the owner bases his claim from the date of his dispossession, and in the second he bases his claim on his title without regard to his possession or dispossession, and time begins to run from the date that the defendant's possession becomes adverse to the plaintiff. ——Evidence Act, S. 101—Title with plaintiff—Onus is on defendant to prove adverse possession—Kabuliyats and applications to Municipality are good evidence of possession.

In a case where the suit is resisted on the ground of acquisition of title by prescription it is not for the plaintiff to prove his title within 12 years. It is for the defendants to prove his adverse proprietary title. 39 Mad. 670; 17 A. L. J. 84, Foll.

Kabuliats and application to the Municipality may not be sufficient to prove possession but prima facie counterparts of leases executed by tenants and applications for permission to build, put in the Municipal Board are the best possible evidence of possession. They would at least tend to show which were the persons who were in actual possession and on whose behalf they held that possession. The application would show also that a certain party alleged himself to be in possession of the property in dispute. (Gokul Prasad, J.). L. RAGHA MAL v. ABDUS SATTAR. 74 I. —Art. 142—Possession following title.

——Suit on title—Article does not apply.

A certain property was gifted and the deed showed that the donee had got possession. The donee instituted a declaratory suit based on title though the plaint contained also a prayer for possession of property on the alternative,

Held, that the ordinary presumption is that possession goes with title, and the suit does not fall under Art. 142. (Rasa, J.). SANT BAKHSH v. RAM NATH. 111 I.C. 376 (Oudh).

——Presumption of possession following title—When arises.

There are only two exceptions to the well established principle of law that in a suit in ejectment on the allegation of possession and dispossession, it is for the plaintiff to make out satisfactorily that he was in possession within 12 years before suit and that the dispossession was within that period. The first exception is where the plaintiff is not able to prove effective possession, as in the case of an open site on which anybody could walk or throw rubbish or stack temporarily firewood, etc., the Court would be justified where the defendant does not adduce satisfactory evidence as to possession in relying upon the presumption of law as to possession following title and giving a decree to the plaintiff on proof of his title. The second exception is where the plaintiff proves his title but cannot prove effective possession as in the case of forest lands or vast wastes and the evidence is not satisfactory on both sides, the Court not being in a position on the evidence to come to a conclusion as to possession, would be justified in relying upon the presumption of law as to possession and giving a decree to the plaintiff. 6 Pat. ———Presumption of possessing following title—Has operation in future.

The law presumes that possession follows title and does not favour forcible entry into possession by trespassers. Further, the presumption is prospective rather than retrospective in operation. The presumption of continuity has an operation in the future, because if it be shown that a particular state of things was existing at a particular time, that state of things will be presumed to continue in the absence of anything to the contrary.

Where in an ejectment suit the plaintiff alleges dispossession by defendant within 12 years, the onus of proving plaintiff's possession prior to his dispossession lies upon him, but in the absence of any proof of defendant's possession for the full statutory period the initial fact of the appellant's title comes to his aid and with greater or less force according to the circumstances established in evidence. 16 M. ———Plaintiff proving title—Onus is on defendant to prove plaintiff's dispossession within 12 years.

Where there is no satisfactory evidence in rebuttal the presumption that possession goes with title must be given effect to and it is only in cases where it is clearly proved that the plaintiff has either been dispossessed or that he has discontinued possession that Art. 142 would apply. In cases where the plaintiff has succeeded in proving a clear title the burden lies on the defendants to prove adverse possession for the statutory period, and if he fails to do so, the plaintiff must succeed simply on the strength of his prima facie title as owner. 41 All. 669 and A.I.R. 1923 Nag. 2, Rel. on. (Moti Sagar, J.). ———Suit for recovery of possession—Plaintiff can invoke the presumption that possession follows title, if he proves ownership up to the time immediately preceding 12 years where manifest acts of enjoyment cannot be proved.

The question, therefore, in every case is (1) whether a plaintiff has proved ownership up to the point of time immediately preceding the 12 years' period; (2) whether all the circumstances were such as to render it natural for the plaintiff to exercise manifest acts of enjoyment of the land during the twelve years preceding suit. If the plaintiff merely proves title at a remote date, he cannot ask the Court to presume that his title continued up to the point of time in question because he may have lost title by adverse possession. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 142—Starting point.

———Possession goes with title applies where land actually vacant—Otherwise presumption exists in favour of person in actual possession.

Where land is admittedly vacant there is no doubt that possession may be presumed to go with title but before possession can be presumed to go with title it must be clearly proved that the land has been lying vacant. Where it is not so proved the presumption is that possession has been with the person in actual possession although he may be holding under an invalid sale. (Chevis, J.). ———Title with plaintiff, but possession with defendant—Plaintiff to prove dispossession within 12 years.

There is no absolute presumption that possession always follows the paper title. When the plaintiff comes to prove his possession under Art. 142 his paper title comes to his aid with greater or less force according to the circumstances established in evidence. As far as the paper titles went, it appeared that the plaintiff on the one hand and the defendants on the other hand were to divide survey No. 58 into equal moieties of 12 acres and 5 gunthas each. But in 1915 when a survey party came to measure the fields it was found that the defendants were in actual possession of more than half of the land namely about one acre and 10 gunthas in excess of the moiety shown under the paper title.

Held, that there being no evidence at all to show at what period the discrepancy in area between the title deeds and the actual occupation crept, in plaintiff must prove that the discrepancy arose within the last 12 years. ———When land is not capable of actual enjoyment in the usual modes previous possession of plaintiff will be presumed to continue till contrary is proved.

Per Dawson Miller, C.J.—Possession, however, is not necessarily the same thing as user and if the land is of such a nature as to render it unfit for actual enjoyment in the usual modes it may properly be presumed that the previous possession of the plaintiff continued until the contrary is proved. This presumption is a presumption of fact. It is by no means conclusive and whether it should be applied or not must depend upon the facts of each particular case. 9 Cal. 744 (F.B.), Rel. on.

Per Mullick, J.—In every case the Court may draw a presumption as to possession from title. It is a presumption of fact which the Evidence Act expressly warrants by S. 114. —Art. 142—Waste land.

——Plaintiff to prove adverse possession—Nature of possession.

In a suit by the plaintiff to establish a right by adverse possession to a Bela (a chur or an island of waste ground), the onus is on him to establish affirmatively his adverse possession for 12 years preceding the suit. The possession which he is required to prove must be adequate in continuity in publicity, and in extent, to show that it is possession adverse to the competitor; and though there may be special difficulty in establishing this in the case of waste or uncultivated jungle land, the onus nevertheless lies upon the plaintiff to prove affirmatively his exclusive possession of the Bela for the requisite period of 12 years.

Held, that, having regard to the revenue entries in which possession was throughout shown as being with the defendants, and the other evidence on the record, the plaintiff had failed to discharge the onus that lay upon him. ——Limited interest—Acquisition by adverse possession.

A limited interest in property can be acquired by adverse possession as well as absolute interest and the quantum of interest acquired depends upon the animus with which possession is held by the person in actual possession of the property. Consequently, where it is found that there was an agreement to execute a usufructuary mortgage and that it was under that agreement that the mortgagee came into possession, then, though the usufructuary mortgage contemplated had not been executed, it must be taken that the mortgagee had been in possession only as a usufructuary mortgagee for the amount of the loan advanced. ——Defendant not a tenant—Suit against him beyond 12 years is barred.

In 1865 certain villages were leased by plaintiff's predecessor to defendant's predecessor on "Mukarrari istemrari" at an annual rent of Rs. 344. In 1879 the original lessee assigned his interest in the villages. The original lessee died about 1891 and afterwards his assignee remained in possession of the village who, it appeared, had paid rent to a mortgagee of the lessor up to 1898, but no rent was paid to the original lessor or his successors. Notices to quit were served in 1915 and again on 20th August, 1919, but the defendants remained in possession, and accordingly, the suit for ejectment was brought in 1920.

About the year 1903, the assignee from lessee apparently was willing to pay rent to the plaintiff's predecessor-in-title, provided that his name was entered as the holder of the mukarrari interest and that he was given receipts made out in his own name. The plaintiff's predecessor-in-title refused to do this, but expressed his willingness to receive rent and give marfatdari receipts. The assignee refused to accept marfatdari receipts, and consequently no rent was paid by him to the original lessor, Held, that the payment of the rent to the mortgagee was not sufficient to create a tenancy between the mortgagor and the assignee and, after the termination of the lease for lives, there was no recognition by the plaintiff or his predecessor-in-title so as to constitute the defendants or their predecessors-in-title, tenants. That the plaintiff failed to prove that the relationship of landlord and tenant was in existence within 12 years prior to the institution of the suit, and that, therefore, the plaintiff's suit for possession was barred by the Limitation Act. ——Adverse possession must be adequate, continuous and exclusive—Acts of possession by owner though not continuous will destroy adverse possession.

Adverse possession, contemplated by Art. 144 must be adequated in continuity, in publicity, and in extent to show that it is possession adverse to the competitor. Standing a title in A, the alleged adverse possession of B must have all the qualities of adequacy, continuity and exclusiveness which should qualify such adverse possession. The onus of establishing these things is upon the adverse possessor. Accordingly when the holder of title proves that he too has been exercising, during the currency of his title, various acts of possession, then the quality of these acts, even though they might have failed to constitute adverse possession as against another, may be abundantly sufficient to destroy that adequacy and interrupt that exclusiveness and continuity which is demanded from any person challenging by possession the title which he holds. ——One Mahomedan co-heir suing another co-heir for possession—Article 144 applies.

When a Mahomedan owner dies leaving several heirs, they all become co-owners and tenants-in-common. A joint owner is legally entitled to retain possession of joint property. Even if he is in exclusive possession of such joint property his possession is ordinarily to be referred to his legal title. The other co owners are accordingly in constructive possession of the property. If therefore, the co-owner in actual possession dispossesses any one of the other co-owners, the suit that is brought for recovery of possession is not a suit for a distributive share of the property of an intestate but is a suit to recover possession of the defined, though undivided, share of the co owner in the possession of the other co-owners. Suit is by an owner for possession of his wall which has been deliberately encroached upon and built upon by the defendants.

Held, that the suit was essentially one for possession and that incidental fact that under the law applicable to such a case in this country it is usual to give to the defendants an opportunity of removing the building, they have constructed on the land encroached upon, in no way makes the suit one for injunction. The defendants, if they so choose, need not remove the construction in question and if so it will fall to the owner of the wall to deal with it. ——Title of plaintiff proved or admitted—Defendant must prove adverse possession for 12 years.

Where a plaintiff sues on the strength of his title without any reference to prior possession or dispossession, in such a case it would seem that on the proper construction of Art. 144, the plaintiff would be entitled to succeed on proof of his title, unless the defendant is able to displace it by proof of adverse possession by himself or his predecessor-in-title for the whole statutory period. In a suit falling within Art. 144 the initial onus on plaintiff is to establish his title and he is not under an obligation to prove his possession within 12 years of the suit. On the contrary, when the plaintiff's title has been proved or is admitted, the burden is on defendant to establish that he, or persons through whom he claims, has or have been in possession adverse to the plaintiff for over 12 years before the suit. The defendant must also prove when his possession became adverse. —Art. 144—Co-owners—Ouster.

———Knowledge on the part of person ousted is necessary—Constructive notice.

In order to establish adverse possession among co-sharers proof of ouster is necessary. Exclusion or ouster involves not merely the act of the person ousting but the state of the mind of the person ousted. Knowledge on the part of the latter therefore is essential. Such knowledge may be proved directly or inferentially. On the principle of constructive notice it may also be proved by showing that the co-sharer against whom the possession was exercised had sufficient notice of facts or sufficient information which would put a reasonable person on enquiry and on receipt of which a reasonably attentive man could not but realise that he was ousted. If the plaintiff is a co-owner with the defendants in any holding in dispute, the mere fact of the non-participation of the plaintiff in the cultivation of the holding for more than 12 years will not enable the defendants to prescribe a title by adverse possession, unless it is proved that there was an ouster of the plaintiff coupled with the denial of his title to the holding in dispute. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 144—Co-owners—Starting point.

—Art. 144—Co-owners—Removal of obstruction.

——Muhammadan Law—Co-heir in possession dispossessing another co-heir—Latter's suit for possession is governed by Art. 144 and not Art. 123.

When a Mahomedan owner dies leaving several heirs they all become co-owners and tenants-in-common. A joint owner is legally entitled to retain possession of joint property. Even if he is in exclusive possession of such joint property, his possession is ordinarily to be referred to his legal title. The presumption therefore is that his possession is lawful and therefore on behalf of all the co-owners. The other co-owners are accordingly in constructive possession of the property. As distinct shares have devolved on them, they all are presumed to have taken their legal shares although possession still remains joint. If therefore the co-owner in actual possession dispossesses any one of the other co-owners, the suit that is brought for recovery of possession is not a suit for a distributive share of the property of an intestate, but is a suit to recover possession of the defined, though undivided, share of the co-owner in the possession of the other co-owners. Such a suit is not covered by Art. 123 at all, and must fall under the general Art. 144, limitation running from the date when the defendant's possession became adverse. But an exception should be made in respect of cases where the whole body of the heirs agree to enjoy jointly the property left by the deceased, without effecting a partition. In such cases Art. 142 or 144 would apply.

There is nothing to prevent the heirs of Karen Christians from taking possession of the estate and agreeing to enjoy it in common. Their title becomes complete when they take possession of the property, and when thereafter any of them are excluded from enjoyment, the cause of action arises on such exclusion and the article applicable is Art. 142. It is not necessary under Art. 144 to prove the exact date when plaintiff became aware that he had been excluded from a right to share in the joint property. The adverse possession in such a case begins to run from the date the alienee takes possession of the property alienated, and each succeeding manager, shebait or mahant cannot get a fresh start so far as the question of limitation is concerned, upon the ground of his not deriving title from any previous manager, the reason being that the succeeding managers, shebaits or mahants form a continuing representation of the idol or the institution to which the endowed property has been dedicated. ——Lease by Mathadipathi without justification—Valid only for grantor's life—Adverse possession—Starts from succeeding Mathadipathi's date of succession.

The language of S. 10 of the Limitation Act gives the clue to the meaning and the applicability of Art. 134. It clearly shows that the article refers to cases of specific trust, and relates to property "conveyed in trust." Neither under the Hindu Law nor in the Mahomedan system is any property "Conveyed," to or vested in a shebait or mutwali, in the case of a dedication. Therefore alienation made by either cannot be treated as an alienation made by a trustee under S. 10. A lease without justification granted by the head of the mutt is valid for his life, and if adopted by his successor would endure during his term of office; but neither the original alienation nor the subsequent adop-

——Property vested in mahant—Alienation by mahant—Suit by successor against alienee—Time runs from death of alienor or when he is presumed to have died—Property vested in idol—Suit must be brought within 12 years of alienation.

Where the property is vested in the juridical person, and the Mahant is only the representative and manager of the idol, the act of alienation is a direct challenge upon the title of the idol, and the idol or the manager of the idol on behalf of the idol must bring the suit within 12 years from the date of the alienation. But where the title is in the Mahant of the Shebait the act of alienation is not a challenge upon the title of the idol, though the property may be endowed property in the sense that its income has to be appropriated to the purposes of the endowment; and there is no adverse possession so long as the person making the alienation is alive and the possession of the defendant becomes adverse to the plaintiffs only when a new title has come into existence capable of maintaining the suit and which has not approved of or acquiesced in the alienation. Where there can be no doubt whatever that though the property is endowed property in the sense that its income has to be appropriated to the purposes of the endowment, still the title is in the successive Mahants, time is to run from the date of the death of alienor who alienated the properties in dispute. If the alienor has not been heard of for 7 years by those who would naturally have heard of him, if he had been alive, it can be presumed that he is dead. The suits are not barred as the time begins to run from the date of the presumption. Damoddar Das v. Lakshan Das, 37 Cal. 885, Ref.; Vaidya Varuthi v. Balusami, 44 Mad. 831, Foll. (Das and Bucknill, JJ.). LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 144—Immovable property.

An under-raiyat holding occupancy rights for his life was ejected by the landlord. The under-raiyat brought a suit under S. 9, Specific Relief Act, asserting that he held permanent heritable occupancy rights. The Court, though it decreed the suit was not concerned with the exact status of the parties. The landlord did not thereupon bring a suit for declaration under S. 42, Specific Relief Act.

Held, that the landlord was not bound to bring a declaration suit under S. 42, and the possession of the under-raiyat was not adverse against him since the decision of the suit under S. 9, Specific Relief Act, as the question whether the occupancy rights held by the under-raiyat were heritable or not, did not really arise in that suit. Further it matters not whether such claimant was an outsider; that is to say, a person who was not a party to the partition proceedings, or a person who was a party to the partition proceedings. Section 10 controls Art. 134 of the Limitation Act of 1908. It clearly shows that the article refers to cases of specific trust and relates to property "conveyed in trust." There is under Hindu and Muhammadan Law, a distinction between a specific trust and a trust for general religious or charitable purposes. (Scott-Smith, J.). ——Suit by co-mortgagor to recover his share from redeeming co-mortgagor—Article 144 applies and not Art. 148.

A co-mortgagor redeeming the whole mortgage does not become a mortgagee of a portion redeemed belonging to the other co-owners, but becomes merely a charge holder and therefore, a suit by one of the co-owners to recover his share of the property on payment of his share of the charge cannot be considered to be governed by Art. 148; in such a case Art. 144 must be applicable. 9 O.C. 91 and 6 O.L.J. 364, Foll.; A.I.R. 1922 All. 410; 14 All. 1 (F.B.); 38 All. 540; 40 All. 683, *Not foll. As between mortgagor and mortgagee neither exclusive possession by the mortgagee for any length of time short of the statutory period of sixty years nor any acquiescence by the mortgagor not amounting to a release of the equity of redemption will be a bar or defence to a suit for redemption if the parties are otherwise entitled to redemption. 32 All. 296 (P C.), Foll. (Hasan and Misra, JJ.). ——Denial by mortgagee of title of mortgagor does not curtail period for redemption.

It is not open to a mortgagee by denying the existence of a mortgage to curtail the period of limitation provided for a suit for redemption. Once a mortgage comes into existence it continues to subsist as a mortgage until the period for its redemption expires despite any attempt made by the mortgagee to deny the existence of that mortgage or to set up an adverse title in himself. Article 144 of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908) is only a residuary article and does not apply so long as Art. 148 of that Act is applicable. (Kanhaiya Lal, J.). Where one of several mortgagors redeems the whole mortgage and obtains possession, a suit against him by another co-mortgagor to recover his share on payment of his share of the money, is not one for redemption but one to recover possession of property on payment of a charge. ———Symbolical possession—Gives a fresh cause of action for possession.

Symbolical possession is as effective as actual possession against the judgment-debtors; and if the judgment-debtors continued in possession even after symbolical possession is delivered to the auction-purchaser, their possession becomes adverse against such purchaser from that very day. The purchaser therefore has a fresh cause of action for instituting the suit for possession against the judgment-debtor; and such a suit would not be one governed by Art. 138, which evidently refers to a case where the purchaser has not obtained delivery of possession, but Art. 144 would apply, and in such a case the period during which an application to set aside sale continued cannot be exoluded. 35 Cal. 209; 25 C.W.N. 376 and 12 M.I.A. 244 (P.C.), Dist. (Chatterjee and Panton, JJ.). ———Plaintiff's title declared—Suit for possession within 12 years of such declaration is not barred.

S in 1908 sued K for possession and mesne profits of lands in the suit which were always subject of submergence. Possession and mesne profits were refused, K having been held not to be in possession, but S's title was declared. Subsequently S brought a suit against K, in 1917 for possession of the same plot,

Held, it was unnecessary for S to prove actual possession in the sense of occupation after the submergence as his possession in law continued until he was dispossessed nor was evidence necessary to show that K had taken possession between 1908, the date of the earlier suit, and 1917, the date of the present suit, as it was expressly admitted in the written statement that K was in possession in June, 1917, when the present suit was filed. S having established his title in the previous suit and not being barred by limitation was entitled to a decree. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 144 — Suit on title.

———Tenant of grove dying without heir—Custom that in such a case grove passes to landlord—Landlord bringing declaratory suit.

Held, that this was not a suit to which Art. 142, Lim. Act, applies but that the article more strictly applicable was Art. 144. The essential difference between these two articles is that in the first case the owner bases his claim from the date of his dispossession, and in the second he bases his claim on his title without regard to his possession or dispossession, and time begins to run from the date that the defendant's possession becomes adverse to the plaintiff. It was not found that he was actually dispossessed on a certain date.

Held, that the plaintiff having proved that he got the lands in suit in a certain year, that fact should be taken as the basis of decision, and that Art. 144 would apply and the Court should consider whether the defendants had completed a title in themselves by being in adverse possession for twelve years. 39 Mad. 617 and 41 All. 669. Foll. (Ryves and Mukerji, JJ.). Representatives of the mortgagors not making the deposit sued for recovery of their shares on proportionate payment within sixty years from the original mortgage.

Held, that the position of those mortgagors who did not pay the mortgage-money remained that of mortgagors, while that of those who paid the share of others became, of mortgagees and the sixty years' rule was not cut down by the mere fact that some of the mortgagors had effected a redemption. —Art. 164—Extension of limitation.

——Limitation Act, S. 5 made applicable by rule under S. 122, to application under O. 9, R. 9—Rule is intra vires and retrospective.

The extension of the provisions of S. 5, Limitation Act, to an application under C. P. Code, O. 9, R. 9, is not an enactment of a new period of limitation. Section 5 is not in any way amended or repealed. The change effected by the rule under C. P. Code, S. 122, relates to the procedure governing applications to restore suits, dismissed for default, to the file. The application was governed by Limitation Act, Art. 164, and it continued to be governed by the same article. The rule, therefore extending S. 5, Limitation Act, to O. 9, R. 9 is intra vires and is restrospective. ——'Summons" has reference to notice of first hearing.

The words in Art. 164 "when the summons was not duly served" refer to the summons given for the first hearing of the suit and that where there has been due service of such summons the mere fact that the defendant has not received notice of an adjourned hearing will not cause limitation to run from the date on which the defendant becomes —Art. 164—Knowledge contemplated.

——Knowledge of the decree within 30 days is material and not knowledge of suit.

The fact that a party had the knowledge of the suit on a particular date is a wholly immaterial circumstance for the purposes of computing limitation under Art. 164. The second part of that article comes into operation only where the application is made more than 30 days after the passing of the decree and the applicant pleads that he had not been duly served and had knowledge of the decree within 30 days from the day on which he made the application. (Tek Chand, J.). MIR AHMED v. PIR BAKHSH. A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 397.

——It is necessary for the Court setting aside an ex parte decree to find definitely that in cases in which the summons was not duly served the applicant did not have knowledge of the decree more than 30 days before the application was made. The terminus a quo is not the commencement of the execution proceedings but the date of the application. (Tek Chand, J.). CHARAN DAS v. PURAN LAL GOBIND PERSHAD. 116 I.C 620= A.I.R. 1929 Lah 235.

——Where all that the defendant was told was that some unknown plaintiff had obtained some sort of a decree against him in a suit, of which he was given no detail,

Held, that defendant cannot be said to have knowledge of the decree against him, and there was no obligation on his part to enquire further. The duty rather was on the plaintiff of giving him full information as to the litigation and the nature of the decree. (Waller, J.). T. S. P. L. PALANIAPPA CHETTIAR v. A. S. VEDACHALA MUDALIAR. 99 I.C. 621=A I.R.1927 Mad. 331.

——Specific knowledge is necessary.

The words of the Article mean something more than mere knowledge that a decree had been passed in some suit, in some Court against the applicant. It means that the applicant must have knowledge not merely that a decree has been passed by some Court against him, but that a particular decree has been passed against him in a particular Court in favour of a particular man for a particular sum. —Art. 164—Scope.

——Applies to proceedings other than suits.

Article 161 is not necessarily restricted to applications to set aside a decree passed in a suit. It applies to applications under O. 9, R. 13 read with S. 144 in proceedings other than suits, e.g., to petitions for filing an award under the Arbitration Act. (Rupchand Bilaram, A.J.C.). —Art. 164—Substituted service.

——In case of substituted service terminus a quo is date of decree.

In the case of substituted service, if the summons was duly served the terminus a quo under Art. 164 is the date of the decree and not the date when it first comes to the knowledge of the defendant. A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 815, Rel. on.; A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 655, Diss. from. (Venkatasubba Rao, J.). KRISHNA PADAYACHI v. VINAYAKASWAMIAR. 122 I.C. 35=A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 222.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 165—Scope.

——Order of substituted service rightly made and properly effected—Knowledge of defendant is immaterial—Time runs from date of decree. A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 487; A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 815 and A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 191, Rel. on.

Where, however, an order for substituted service is improperly obtained, as being made on insufficient material contained in an application supported by affidavit the summons cannot be said to have been duly served within meaning of Art. 164, and the time accordingly runs not from the date of the decree but from the date when it first came to the knowledge of the defendant. ——Substituted service—Summons is duly served even if it does not come to the knowledge of defendant.—As time runs from the date of the decree, the application for setting aside an ex-parte decree made after the expiry of 30 days from the date of the decree is clearly barred by time. (Shadi Lal, C.J.). DITTU RAM v. NAWAB. 92 I.C. 272= 7 L.L.J. 448=26 P.L.R. 704=A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 639.

——Where the defendant proved that a summons was never sent to be served on him and there was no rebuttal, and his application to set aside ex parte decree was made on the 37th day after the decree was passed,

Held, under the circumstances, the onus was upon plaintiff to show that defendant had knowledge of the decree more than 30 days before date of his application. (Scott-Smith, J.). NIHALA v. KAZAN SINGH. 73 I.C. 34=A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 233.

——Time runs from date of decree and not from date of knowledge.

In an application to set aside a final decree passed ex parte, after substituted service had been taken out to the defendant,

Held, that the matter of the time at which defendant first had knowledge of the decree only becomes relevant after he has proved that substituted service ought not to have been ordered or was not duly carried out. Unless he can do one of these things his application is barred by time. The notice of the application for final decree being as effectual as if it had been served on him personally, the limitation for his application to set aside the ex parte decree runs from the date of the decree. 9 N.L.R. 35, Foll. (*Batten, C. —Art. 174—Application by decree-holder.

——Application by decree-holder to record payment made to him out of Court—Article 181 applies not Art. 174.

Where a decree-holder in execution of his decree sought to escape the bar of limitation under Art. 182 by reference to a payment made by the judgment-debtor out of Court,

Held, that he was entitled to plead the payment that Art. 174 of the Limitation Act is not applicable to a case under sub-R. 1 of R. 2 of O. 21, but is applicable only to a case under O. 21, R. 2, sub-R. (2) and that under Art. 181 the decree-holder can certify the payment within 3 years of the date of payment.

There is no period of limitation for an application by decree-holder, who has received payment from the judgment-debtor out of Court, to record the payment. Therefore the only article applicable is 181 of the Limitation Schedule which provides that an application, for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in this schedule, shall be made within three years from the time when the right to apply accrues. entitled under S. 12, Cl. 2 to exclude the day on which the judgment complained of was pronounced and the time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree. S. 12, sub-S. 2 of the Limitation Act is general in its terms and applied to all applications for leave to appeal including an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty-in-Council. A decree for Rs. 4,087-6-0 with costs and interest at 6 per cent. was passed on 11th April, 1923. A petition of adjustment was filed on 19th September, 1924, before the executing Court and the Court directed that the terms should be noted and the case disposed of in terms of the petition of compromise. The compromise provided that the decree-holder should get Rs. 4,000 in full payment of his decree, that the judgment-debtor should pay Rs. 1,000 forthwith and the balance in monthly instalments of Rs. 150 from October, 1924, and in default of payment of four instalments the decree-holder would realize the whole of the decretal amount with interest at 9 per cent. The last clause of the agreement was that the house belonging to the judgment-debtor should remain charged for the decretal amount and that the decree-holder should in default of payment realize the same by sale of the house with interest at 9 per cent. by calculating from the date of default of any payment. Rs. 1,000 were paid and also the first two instalments and thereafter payment ceased. On 10th December, 1928, an application for execution of the decree was made. It was argued that more than three years had elapsed after the last step-in-aid of execution on 13th September, 1924, and that the parties could not by agreement enlarge the time of limitation. Alternatively it was argued that if effect could be given to the compromise, then under the terms the whole debt became due in April, 1925, and that application was more than three years after that date,

Held, that as the compromise had been acted upon and payments made under it which were credited by the decree-holder, effect could be given to the compromise,

Held, further that when all the clauses of the agreement were read together, the intention of the parties was to leave at the option of the decree-holder either to enforce the payment of the whole of the decretal amount at once or to continue to abide by the instalments and that he was entitled to recover the instalments which were due for three years before the application. 18 W. ——Article 181 applies only when Art. 182 cannot apply.

Article 182 is the article framed for an application for execution of a decree. Article 181 could be brought into play only when there are definite circumstances which would make Art. 182 inapplicable.

A decree-holder made an application for execution. Before the date fixed for sale the decree-holder made another application to the Court stating that he had given the judgment-debtor six months' time, that his application may be struck off and the judgment-debtor saddled with costs. He was not taken on his word and the Court directed that the judgment-debtor should appear in order to verify the application. On the day fixed for appearance the judgment-debtor did not appear and Court struck off the application. More than three years after this an application for execution was again made. It was attempted to prove the oral agreement granting six months' time to bring the case within the purview of Art. 181,

Held, that the only article that could apply to the subsequent application was Art. 182 and not 181. A. I. R. 1927 All. 16; A.I.R. 1927 All. 165, Dist. (Mukerjee, J.). MOHAMMAD ISHAQ v. BALDEO PRASAD. 114 I.C. 894=A.I.R. 1929 All. 606.

In order that an application for execution may be treated as an application in continuation of the previous application; the previous application must have been dismissed without any default on the part of the decree-holder, and the scope and character of the two applications must be the same.

Where in an application the first condition was fulfilled; but as regards the second some new properties have been added in the fresh application, but this amendment as to adding properties was made within a reasonable time from the date when amendment became necessary,

Held, that the application ought to be treated as an application in continuation of the previous execution. (Ross and Kulwant Sahay, JJ.). BISHUNDEO SAHAY SAHU v. MAHADEO PRASAD SAHU. 102 I.C. 895=6 Pat. 274=8 P.L.T. 771=A. I. R. 1927 Pat. 223.

——Certification by decree-holder is not application.

The word "application," when used in Art. 181 means an application "ejusdem generis" in other words an application on which the Court has to decide judicially; and as certification by a decree-holder under O. 21, R. 2 (1) does not raise any point on which a Court has to decide judicially, a certification is not in any circumstances an application within the meaning of Art. 181. ——Execution application recorded for statistical purposes—Application remains pending.

The Court passed an order on an execution application as follows. "The 3rd item was delivered to the petitioners and the petition was recorded." There were some proceedings in Court relating to item 2 and a temporary injunction prevented its delivery. Subsequent to the removal of the temporary injunction, an execution application was put in,

Held, that the original application should not be regarded as dismissed. It was still pending and the latter application was only intended to call the attention of the execution Court to the fact that the execution application had to be proceeded with. Hence there was no bar to the original execution application being proceeded with.

——Preliminary mortgage-decree for certain amount, against Hindu father—Sons, not parties to suit, subsequently obtaining declaration that smaller amount was binding on family—Final decree passed for the smaller amount but silent as to balance—Plaintiff applying under R. 6 for recovery of balance after three years after declaratory decree obtained by sons,

Held, that the effect of the declaratory decree obtained by the sons was to confine the charge on the family property to smaller amount only, and that the balance of the amount ceased to be a mortgage-debt and hence the plaintiff had under O. 34, R. 6, C. P. Code, no right to recover the balance of the amount.

Held further, that the right of plaintiff to recover the balance must be by execution of the decree for the balance, treating it as a simple money decree.

Held, also that since the right to recover the balance personally from mortgagor accrued to plaintiff when the declaratory decree in favour of the sons was passed, on that date, it must be deemed to have been settled, that his remedy for the balance was against the mortgagor personally.

The application which was made more than three years after the date of the declaratory decree in favour of the sons, date for execution of the personal decree was barred under Art. 181, Limitation Act. the judgment-debtor to pay the entire balance due if he made default as to any two successive instalments.

Held, (Per Full Bench).—That if the application for execution is an application to recover certain instalments already overdue, Art. 182 (7) applies and limitation will run in respect of each instalment from the date on which it became payable,

Held, further, that if the application for execution is an application to recover the balance of the decretal amount remaining unpaid, Art. 181 applies and limitation will run as to the whole balance unpaid, from the date of the later of the last two successive instalments unpaid, the decree-holder being entitled to a decree for the whole balance if his application is within three years of that date less the amount of any individual instalments, which regarded as individual instalments, are not already barred by limitation.

Per Mukerji, J.—The provision in the decree, which makes the whole of the decretal amount payable, in case of one or more defaults, is only an ancillary clause and can have no independent existence. It is, therefore, not right to say that, there being no clause in Art. 182 which would directly apply. Article 181 should apply to it. (Sulaiman, Ag.C.J., Mukerji and Boys, JJ.). ———Certification of payment by decree-holder.

It is not incumbent upon the decree-holder to certify payment by making an application for the purpose, and therefore Art. 181 does not apply. ———Application by decree-holder to record payment made to him out of Court—Article 181 applies.

Where a decree-holder in execution of his decree sought to escape the bar of limitation under Art. 182 by reference to a payment made by the judgment-debtor out of Court.

Held, that he was entitled to plead the payment that Art. 174 of the Limitation Act is not applicable to a case under sub-R. 1 of R. 2, of O. 21, but is applicable only to a case under O. 21, R. 2, sub-R. (2) and that under Art. 181 the decree-holder can certify the payment within 3 years of the date of payment.

There is no period of limitation for an application by decree-holder, who has received payment from the judgment-debtor out of Court, to record the payment. Held, the final decision of the suit in favour of the decree-holder operated to revive the original application for attachment no question of limitation arose. But if the decree-holder's successes did not operate to revive the original application for attachment and the decree-holder had to make a fresh application the fresh application is governed by Art. 181 and not by Art. 182 of the Limitation Act. Therefore the fact that the Court was moved to take action by the Receiver makes no difference. The Court, if it so desires can take action under S. 37, at any time during the pendency of the proceedings when a transfer open to objection under the said section is brought to its notice and therefore there is no reason why the Receiver should be restricted by Art. 181 of the Limitation Act in moving the Court to take action. Obiter: even assuming Art. 181 to be applicable the right to move in the matter accrued to Receiver from day to day as long as the proceedings continued. ——— Preliminary decree appealed from—Time for applying for final decree runs from appellate decree.

Where there has been an appeal from a preliminary mortgage-decree and the appellate Court has not extended the time for payment, the period of three years within which, under Art. 181 an application for a final decree under O. 34, R. 5, Sub-R. 2, must be made, runs from the date of the decree of the appellate Court, not from the expiry of the time for payment, fixed by the preliminary decree, even when the appellate Court has confirmed the decree of the lower Court.

Where before the date of the appellate Court's decision the three years and six months had passed and therefore it was contended that decree was dead before the appellate Court gave its decision and could not be revived.

Held, that when an appellant appeals, unless there is some rule dismissing the appeal by appellate Court for want of time or an order is procured dismissing it, his appeal stands till it is heard. A. Held, that the appeal was preferred on behalf of the whole family though in the name of the sons only and the decree passed in appeal was a decree in which the first Court's decree merged and that limitation for the application for making the decree final, would run from the date of such decree and the application was within time. 39 All. 641, Rel. on. (Sulaiman and Boys, JJ.). An application under O. 34, R. 6 is an application for a new decree in the suit and it cannot be said to be an application for enforcing a judgment or decree within the meaning of Art. 183, and consequently Art. 183 is not applicable to an application under O. 34, R. 6. Article 181 of the Limitation Act applies to such an application and the case of 42 Cal. 294 in so far as it decided that Art. 181 does not apply to such an application, was not rightly decided. 42 Cal 294, Overruled; 40 All. 551, Foll. (Sanderson, C.J., Walmsley, Rankin, Buckland and Mukerji, JJ.). The words "the day fixed" in O. 34, R. 3 refer to the day fixed under the preceding rule.

Postponement of the day fixed for payment at defendant's request does not amount to a dismissal of the application of the plaintiff to have a final decree passed. The application must be deemed to have remained pending for final orders and the Court to have postponed the passing of such orders. No further application for a final decree is necessary and any subsequent application if made in that behalf is only for the purpose of continuing the proceeding on the original application which had been suspended. —Art. 181—Revival of execution.

——Application for reviving execution proceeding is governed by Art. 181 unless decree-holder is prevented from taking action in pursuance of his rights. Properties of the judgment-debtor were sold in execution of the decree when a third person became the auction-purchaser. The judgment-debtor having objected, the sale was set aside on 5th July, 1923. The auction-purchaser appealed against the order which was confirmed on appeal. The decree-holder filed a fresh application for execution of the decree on 15th December, 1926,

Held, that the time for reviving the execution proceedings accrued on 5th July, 1923 when the execution proceedings were at an end, the sale being set aside. The present application being made on 15th December, 1926 more than three years after the right to apply accrued, was barred. The decree holder could not take advantage of the appeal by the auction purchaser and count the period from the date of order of appellate Court. LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 181—Revival of execution.

application for revival is not a fresh application for execution. The principle is based on equity and justice, and the decree-holder is merely to request the Court to take up and continue the proceedings which have not finally terminated, but which have remained in abeyance for some reason or other beyond his control. It is not correct to say that the amendment of S. 15 was intended to sweep away and replace the old doctrine of revival. The two principles are not co-extensive or identical. The application for revival not being a fresh application for execution cannot be governed by Art. 182. The proper article is Art. 181. 42 All. 564. Foll. (*Walsh, A. C. ——Execution stayed by injunction through Court—Application for revival is governed by Art. 181 and time runs when obstacle to its execution is removed.

A final decree for sale was made on the 7th June, 1913. An application for execution was made on 4th January, 1916. The decree was sent to the Collector for execution. While the execution was still pending before the Collector certain people filed a suit on 13th November, 1916 to obtain a declaration that the property ordered to be sold was not liable to be sold in execution of the decree-holder's decree. On the same day the Court seized of the suit, enjoined the decree-holders from proceeding with the same. The suit was finally dismissed by the High Court on 6th July, 1920,

Held, that the obstacle to the execution of the decree was removed on 6th July, 1920 and therefore an application for revival of the execution proceedings filed within three years of this date was within time. ——Application for execution—Further progress barred by act of Court—Application to revive is governed by Art. 181—Application kept on pending list need not be revived.

It may be that where a bar to the further progress of execution proceedings has been created by an order of a Court of competent jurisdiction such proceedings may only be revived by an application under Art. 181 after the removal of the bar, but in a case where the Court intended to and did, as a matter of fact, maintain an application for execution on its pending file, and stopped proceedings for the time being and did not finally dispose of the application, an application made to the Court for the sole object of drawing its attention to the pending file, so that it may proceed with it, is not governed by any Article of the Limitation Act. An application contemplated by Art. 181 must be an application required by law to be made, and there is no provision of law which requires a decree-holder to make an application where the sole object is the continuation of proceedings in a pending case. ——Article 181 applies.

When an execution application is brought and properties are attached in execution of that application if any obstacle is placed in the way of the properties being sold and assets realised for the purpose of meeting the decree debt by the action of a third party putting in a claim petition and it becomes necessary for the decree-holder either to dispute the claim proceedings or to bring a suit to have the matter decided whether the properties are those of the judgment-debtor, his subsequent application to sell those properties is not governed by Art. 182 of the Limitation Act, but is in the nature of a revival of the original execution application and Art. 181 of Limitation Act will apply. ——Litigation by stranger setting aside sale in execution revives execution proceedings.

Where the effect of the decree in favour of a stranger, was to set aside the sale and the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor were both parties to the suit.

Held, that by reason of the litigation which took place after the sale and by reason of the decree in favour of the stranger the execution proceedings can be said to have been revived and the subsequent execution case may be regarded as a continuation of the former execution proceedings. ——A decree-holder made an application for execution claiming the correct amount as due to him. In the sale proclamation, however, by some clerical mistake, a lesser amount was put down. The sale proceeded but the decree remained unsatisfied as to a certain amount. The Court held that the decree-holder having failed within three years' time to have the figure corrected is debarred from executing the decree in respect of the correct amount. In no instance, however, did the decree-holder claim anything less than what was actually due to him under the decree,

Held, that the decree-holder was not precluded from claiming the correct amount due to him, ——Amendment after period of limitation—Decree not revived.

Where a decree is quite capable of execution as it stands, its amendment cannot entitle the decree-holder to a fresh period of limitation under Art. 182, Cl. (4). ——Appeal against other defendants in which decree against some defendants not challenged and has become final—Time begins to run from date of decree of trial Court and not from date of decree in appeal.

The expression 'final decree' clearly implies that the appeal should be from the decree which is sought to be executed; or at any rate, in the appeal that decree should be impugned, so that the order passed by the appellate Court should finally incorporate the decree of the first Court. In cases where the first Court's decree becomes merged in the appellate Court's decree, time, of course, begins to run from the date of the appellate Court's decree. Article 182 does not mean that, even if an appeal has been preferred against other defendants in which the decree against some defendants who are not parties to the appeal is not challenged in any way and has, in fact, become final the time can still be enlarged by reason of the appeal. 13 All. 1 (F.B.) and A.I.R. 1921 All. 56, Rel. on; 26 Mad. 91 (F.B.) and 47 Cal. 813, Not foll. (Sulaiman and Niamatullah, JJ.). ——Time for applying for execution runs from date of appellate decree even when the appeal is against a portion of the decree.

—Art. 182—Applicability.

——Giving time by the decree-holder to the judgment-debtor does not take an execution application out of Art. 182.

Article 182 is the article framed for an application for execution of a decree. Article 181 could be brought into play only when there are definite circumstances which would make Art. 182 inapplicable. Those circumstances should not and cannot include an alleged fact that the judgment-debtor had been given time out of Court without any record of that fact being placed in the proceedings.

A decree-holder made an application for execution. Before the date fixed for sale, the decree-holder made another application to the Court stating that he had given the judgment-debtor six month's time, that his application may be struck off and the judgment-debtor saddled with costs. He was not taken on his word and the Court directed that the judgment-debtor should appear in order to verify the application. On the day fixed for appearance the judgment-debtor did not appear and Court struck off the application.

LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 182 — Applicability.

More than three years after this an application for execution was again made. It was attempted to prove the oral agreement granting six months' time to bring the case within the purview of Art. 181,

Held, that the only article that could apply to the subsequent application was Art. 182 and not 181. A.I.R. 1927 All. 16; A.I.R. 1927 All. 165, Dist. (Mukerji, J.). MAHAMMAD ISHAQ v. BALDEO PRASAD. 114 I.C. 894=A.I.R. 1929 All. 606.

——Decree not directing sale of mortgaged property in case of default by mortgagor to pay—Decree should be treated as under S. 375, Act XIV of 1882, and not under S. 92, Transfer of Property Act and Art. 182 will apply.

Certain persons instituted a suit for redemption of a certain mortgage against A and S. At that time, the procedure in respect of mortgage suits was governed by the provisions of certain sections of the Transfer of Property Act. The parties entered into an amicable arrangement and a decree was passed giving effect to the terms of that arrangement. The decree stated that if the plaintiffs, who represented the mortgagors paid a certain sum at any time to the defendants, the representatives of the mortgagees, the defendants, were to restore to them the possession of the mortgaged property. A was then a minor. He was not a party to the compromise. The same A claiming that he was the representative of one of the mortgagors in 1926, applied to pay the money into Court and to redeem the property as against S.

Held, that the decree as it failed to give the mortgagee authority to sell the property was not a decree under S. 92, T.P. Act, and therefore, must be treated as a decree under S. 375, Act XIV, 1882, and so it was governed for the purpose of limitation by Art. 182. (Stuart, C.J. and Raza, J.). IRSHAD AHMAD v. MT. ——Decree of Chief Court executed by High Court—Limitation for execution is governed not by Art. 183 but by Art. 182.

The object of S. 26, Burma Courts Act (II of 1912) is simply and solely to provide for the execution of decrees of the Chief Court by the High Court, which succeeded it. It was not intended that a decree of the Chief Court should come under a different law of limitation simply because it was executed by the High Court. The article applicable therefore to such decrees is Art. 182 and not Art. 183. (Pratt, Offg.C.J. and Cunliffe, J.). An order on an application under O. 21, R. 95, by an auction-purchaser who is also decree-holder, is an order under S. 47, C.P.Code. The application is governed by the limitation laid down in Art. 182 and not by Art. 180.

Where the auction-purchaser is the decree-holder himself and he presents an application or possession, he occupies therein, in reality, a dual position. He is, from one point of view the auction-purchaser applying to be put in possession of his property, while from another point of view he is the decree-holder claiming to have his decree fully satisfied by having, so to speak, the proceeds of the decree made over to him. ——"In accordance with law"—What is.

The words "in accordance with law" should not be pressed too far in favour of a judgment-debtor who has not paid his debt; and certainly an application does not become contrary to law merely because it has been dismissed.

Where the decree-holder came before the Court with a perfectly honest and bona fide application properly expressed for execution of a decree, but while pointing out the fact that he was unable to execute the decree against the judgment-debtor individually, he asked the Court to allow joint execution whereas such joint execution was not permissible in view of an order passed,

Held, it cannot be said that decree-holder when making his application, can be reasonably considered to have known that he was making an application which the Court was incompetent to grant and his application may be considered to be in accordance with law. (Pullan, A.J.C.). RUDRA PRATAB SINGH v. SHEO PRASAD. 79 I. C. 880=11 O.L.J. 604=A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 77.

——Application conforming with O. 21, Rr. 11 to 14 but returned for some other reason is not invalid.

Order 21, Rr. 11 to 14 give the particulars which the law requires to be stated in an application for execution. If the application conforms with those rules and is presented upon a properly stamped paper it must be taken to have been properly presented in accordance with law. If not, the Court is empowered either to reject the application or to allow the defect to be remedied within a time to be fixed by it. It may therefore be inferred from this that where the application is returned on the ground that the requirements of the rule have not been complied with and is not amended within the time fixed, it cannot be regarded as having been presented in accordance with law; but it is nowhere stated, that where the application conforms with the prescribed requirements and is returned for some other reasons shall not be deemed to have been presented in accordance with law. 23 Cal. 217, Not foll. (Dawson Miller, C.J. and Kulwant Sahay, J.). An application for execution failed to mention costs and the previous application and the Court returned it for amendment. The amended application was not signed and verified and it was filed,

Held, the omission to mention the amount of costs is a defect of immaterial character but the omission to mention, as required by O. 21, R. 11 (b), the previous application was such a material defect as to render the application not in accordance with law, as it did not show whether the application was within the period of limitation. "In accordance with law" is a phrase adjectival not only to the words "the proper Court for execution" but also to the words "to take some step in execution." LIMITATION ACT (1908), Art. 182—Construction.

——Appeal does not operate as stay of execution but only postpones the time of limitation.

In execution purposes an appeal by itself never operates as a stay. There is the right to execute the moment the decree is passed; but if there is an appeal the time of limitation is postponed and does not run until the decree determining the appeal is made. So the broad principle in India as regards execution matters is that time is not computed from the date when the right to apply accrues but is postponed in cases where there is an appeal. ———Defective application—Defect not serious—Defect cured by leave of Court—Date of original filing is date on which execution must be held to be taken.

One of the previous applications for execution was filed on the 24th June, 1920, a date within 3 years of the next previous application. The requirements of O. 21, Rr. 11 to 24 had not been complied with. The Court did not reject the application but returned the application for the defect to be remedied under R. 17 within a certain time fixed by the Court. The time fixed was 15 days and the defect was remedied on 4th July, 1920.

Held, there was no necessity for the return of the application and the Court ought to have kept the application. The time fixed for the curing of the defect may be exoluded by the Court under S. 148 of the C. P. Code. As the Court after the defect was cured started proceedings in sale it must be presumed that the Court extended the time under the authority vested in it under S. 148. Under these circumstances, the application of 24th June, 1920 was a legal one and not defective and must be taken to be the one on which the execution proceedings were taken by the Court. Hence the date of filing the application must be taken to be 24th June, 1920 and not 14th July, 1920, 26 Mad. 101 and 40 Mad. 949, Considered. (Dalal, J.C.). On 7th July, 1917, the execution of a mortgage decree for a sale of a house was first taken out. On September 12th, 1917, injunction was granted restraining the sale of half the house. On 19th November, 1917, an application was made to take a step-in-aid of execution with respect to the other half of the house. That half of the house was sold, The injunction was dissolved on 8th November, 1918. Application for execution with respect to the other half was made on January 10th, 1922.

Held, that the last application was made on 19th November, 1917, and limitation began to run from that date. The only period which the decree-holder was entitled to exclude on account of the injunction was from 19th November, 1917, the date on which limitation began to run, to 8th November, 1918, the date on which the injunction was dissolved. Therefore, the application made on 10th January, 1922, having been made more than 3 years after the date of the last application, after deducting the period covered by the injunction the application was time-barred. On the 8th October, 1924, the respondent filed an application for execution of the decree against the appellant in default of payment of two instalments of Rs. 2,000 each, for the years 1923 and 1924 respectively and claimed, as the judgment-debtor failed to pay according to the decree, that the Court might direct the delivery of the lands by the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder. It was pleaded that execution was time-barred.

Held, that each instalment as it became due was a claim originating under the decree from the date when such claim arose, that the provisions of Cl. 7 of Art. 182 applied and that therefore execution ———Applies to decrees comprising two or more several decrees—Decree providing two interdependent sources of realisation—Explanation does not apply.

The decree was as follows:—"The defendants will pay the entire decretal money within six months. In case of non-payment of the same the mortgaged property will be sold. No person of the defendants is liable under the decree.....The plaintiff will get Rs. 715-3-6 from Abhoy Kumar out of the money of S." The first application for the sale of D was made on the 14th December, 1918, and the execution proceeded to the 1st December, 1919. The second application for execution in respect of the minor relief granted in the mortgage decree namely for realization of Rs. 715-3-6 from Abhoy Kumar was filed more than three years after the date of the decree though it was in time as reckoned from the 1st application,

Held, that the main relief, the realization of the mortgage dues, being the one governing note of the decree, makes the two sources of realisation interdependent, that the mortgagee was entitled to proceed against one of his securities at a time, if he thought it to be sufficient for realization, and that the second application was not time-barred. —Art. 182—Limitation.

———When a decree for possession is passed on condition of payment of a certain sum by the decree-holder, the starting point for limitation for execution of the decree is the date of the decree and not the date of payment by the decree-holder. The decree-holder cannot obtain extension of limitation by deferring payment. Limitation runs from the date of the decree, whether any time for payment is fixed or not. The only effect of fixing a time for payment is that payment cannot be made after the date fixed. If no time is fixed, payment may be made under the terms of the decree at any time within the period of limitation, i.e., within three years of the date of the decree. The decree-holder applied in 1918 on the basis of assignment of decree which however by oversight did not refer to the decree in question but his application was filed and not dismissed. He applied in 1921 and in 1924, January. Both these applications were struck off owing to default of the decree-holder. He then filed a fresh application in 1924 May.

Held, the application in 1918 for execution having been ordered to be simply "filed" and not having been struck off, owing to default of the decree-holder, must be deemed to have been still pending when the application was filed in 1921. Although this application of 1921 purported to be a fresh application for execution it should be treated for the purpose of limitation as an application for revival. 27 All. 334 (P.C.), Foll. (Sulaiman, J.). ———Setting aside of sale under O. 21, R. 90, C. P. Code—Subsequent application for execution is in continuation of the first.

A landlord decree-holder applied for execution of a rent-decree when the Executing Court held that the execution should proceed as on the basis of a money-decree and not as a rent-decree. It proceeded in that way and the sale of certain property of the judgment-debtor was actually confirmed and the case was dismissed on full satisfaction. On the same day, the judgment-debtor put in a petition to set aside the sale under the provisions of O. 21, R. 90, and eventually the sale was set aside; the decree-holders then applied once more to execute their decree as a rent-decree, Held, that the second application should be treated as a continuation of the preceding application inasmuch as the prayers in both were to execute the decree as rent-decree and further that the decree-holder's right to execute the decree revived on the day the sale was set aside. An application for execution against the judgment-debtor and the surety is not barred, if made within three years of the application against the judgment-debtor alone where the surety binds himself to pay the amount of the decree, if the judgment-debtor does not pay. The question depends on the application of the provisions of S. 145, C. P. Code to Art. 182. If the effect of S. 145, C.P. Code, is to make the decree equivalent to a decree passed jointly against the surety and the judgment-debtor then the case is covered by Explanation (1) to Art. 182, if not Cl. 5 of Art. 182, applies. S. 145, C. P. Code, and the limitation for an application for execution of a decree against him is that laid down by Art. 182, Limitation Act and the decree-holder cannot brisk away from that Article.

In an application for execution by the decree-holder names of both, the judgment-debtor and the surety were given in column 9, the column showing the persons against whom the decree was to be executed. But in column 10, the column showing the mode of execution sought, he prayed only for the attachment of the judgment-debtor's property. Notice was issued to the judgment-debtor only,

Held, although the name of the surety was shown in column 9 in the proceedings of 1917, no steps can be said to have been asked for against the surety in those proceedings; those proceedings therefore do not save limitation so far as the surety is concerned. The judgment-creditor obtained a decree on 4th April, 1918, against the deceased father of the respondent who was a member of a joint Hindu family. The sons were brought upon the record in the darkhast. On 7th November, 1922, the Court ordered notices to issue and on 17th November, the notices were issued returnable on 23rd January, 1923. On 23rd January, 1923, the appellant gave an application to meet the objections of two of the sons who had refused to accept service on the ground that their names were not properly described in the notice. On the same day the judgment-creditor applied for further time to put in the list of movables which he had been ordered by the Court to put in under O. 21, R. 12. C.P. Code. That application was rejected and the darkhast was dismissed. The notices ordered on the application of that date were never issued. On 22nd January, 1926, the judgment-creditor filed the present darkhast.

Held, that an inventory was not nacessary and that the darkhast was a step-in-aid of execution and so was the application of 23rd January, 1923. 37 Bom. 42 and A. I. It is not necessary that an application to take some step-in-aid of execution must be made during the pendency of an application by that particular decree-holder in accordance with law to the proper Court for execution of the decree; such an application can be made when no execution proceeding at the instance of the decree-holder who makes it is pending in Court. The words "where the application next hereinafter mentioned has been made" in Cl. 5, Art. 182 apply both to an application for execution and an application to take some step-in-aid of execution and both the applications are mentioned independently of each other in the clause, with the result that each is sufficient to save limitation and the second kind of application is not dependent on the first. ——Applications for final decree in mortgage suit if steps-in-aid.

In 1904 a decree was passed in a mortgage suit. Within three years an application for order for sale of property was made, but was dismissed. Within three years of the latter application, similar application was made but was dismissed as no final decree was made as required by the new C. P. Code. Within three years an application for final decree was made which was dismissed for non-payment of process fees. A similar application for final decree was made in time but was withdrawn, —Art. 182—Step-in-aid—Filing list of witnesses.

——Any step taken by the decree-holder to remove an obstacle thrown by the judgment-debtor in the way of execution of the decree is a step-in-aid of execution which can give a fresh start for limitation. Article 182, Cl. (5) does not require that the application to take step-in-aid of execution of a decree should be made only in the course of execution proceedings under S. 47. The step-in-aid of execution may be taken in connexion with any other proceedings which may not, strictly speaking, be proceeding in execution of the decree, but which affects the execution of the decree.

Judgment-debtor applied under R. 90, O. 21, for setting aside sale. The decree-holder filed a hazari, or list of witnesses in attendance, but the application was dismissed and the judgment-debtor applied for review of the order. In the course of the trial of this review application, the decree-holder filed a list of witnesses and a petition of objection to the review.

Held, that the filing of the list of witnesses and the petition of objection are such steps-in-aid of execution as can give a fresh start for limitation any step in any proceeding which obstructs execution being a step-in-aid. ——Foreign decree—Execution in British India—Valid step in-aid of execution taken in foreign Court—Must be accepted as such in British Indian Court. 40 Mad. 1069 (F.B.), Dist.; 42 Bom. 420, Appr.

Per Schwabe, C. J.—The law to be considered is that of the place where the application is made which will generally also be the place of origin of the decree and Cl. 5 of the Art. 182, of the Indian Limitation Act must be read to mean "to take some step which, according to the law of the place where the application therein referred to has to be made, is a step-in-aid of execution."

Per Wallace, J.—When we have to consider the interpretation of Art. 182 with reference to execution of a foreign decree, we have to consider not whether the application would have been a step-in-aid in British India with reference to the execution of a British Indian decree, but whether the application having reference to a foreign decree and having been brought in the proper foreign Court, was a step-in-aid under the law of that Court and if it was, such a step-in-aid, it satisfies Art. 182. When a foreign Court has laid down that an application such as the present to transmit the documents to British India was at the time it was made, a proper step-in-aid of execution, it would be wrong for the British Indian Court to hold, when called on to execute that foreign decree that that application was not at the time it was made, a perfectly legal step-in-aid within the meaning of Art. 182 of the Indian Limitation Act. ——Application whether necessary for realising decretal amount is the test—Application made to point out official mistake in not calculating interest due under decree is step-in-aid of execution.

The determination of the question whether an application amounts to a step-in-aid of execution depends not, on the stage at which the application is made by the decree-holder, but it depends upon the nature of the application and the relief claimed therein. One main test in such case is whether it was necessary for the decree-holder to make the application in order to realize the money awarded to him under the decree and in accordance with the decree.

An application made to point out that the official had omitted to include interest granted under the decree payable to him and to correct the mistake by addition of interest after calculation, is necessitated by a mistake of an official of the Court and is a step-in-aid of execution. ——Instalment decree—Application to make decree final may be a step-in-aid.

A decree was payable by yearly instalments the first of which was payable on the 31st March, 1914. On failure to pay any one instalment in time the decree allowed sale of the mortgage property or a sufficient portion thereof to recover the amount of the instalment overdue. The creditors sought to make the decree final on default instead of applying for sale. On the 30th October, 1919 the creditors applied to make the decree final as regards the instalment due on 31st March, 1917. The application was rejected,

Held that an application to make a decree final may in one case be considered as a step-in-aid although it may in other cases be not so and that the application on 30th October, 1919 was a step-in-aid which started a new period of limitation running. ——Application for citing witnesses is not a step-in-aid of execution.

In an execution matter, a claim was put in by a judgment-debtor which was registered under S. 47, C. P. Code. On 28th April, 1917, the decree-holder applied for time to file written statement in answer to the claim and to cite witnesses: but as a matter of fact did not prosecute the petition thereafter, Held, the application of 28th April, did not constitute a step-in-aid of execution. Although an application to the Court to issue summons or do some other act necessary for proceeding with the execution case or for removing a bar to the execution proceedings would be step-in-aid of execution, an application for time to cite witnesses irrespective of whether the decree-holder does so or not, is not a step-in-aid of execution. Any application which, if successful, would facilitate execution or prevent an obstacle being raised to the execution of a decree, whether an application for execution is pending or not cannot on that ground be treated as a 'step-in-aid of execution' 17 Cal. 268, Foll.

In some cases the Courts in their anxiety to prevent decree-holders being deprived of the fruits of their decree by the "technical plea of limitation have stretched the article to such a point, that it has become difficult for the most exprienced lawyer (to say nothing of layman) to say when many decrees will become time-barred. In matters like limitation certainty is the first desideratum. An application made at a time, when no execution petition is pending cannot be a step-in-aid of execution. ———Per Walsh, J.—The expression used in Art. 183 of the Limitation Act are clearly capable of being read so as to cover an application for restitution on reversal of the decree of the High Court by the Privy Council, which is in substance to enforce a decree of the Privy Council which restored the parties to the position they were in before the High Court interfered; and Art. 183 of the Limitation Act applies to such applications.

Per Ryves, J.—The language of Art. 183 is different to that of Art. 182. Article 183 provides for 'the execution of a decree or order of any Civil Court,' Art. 183 is 'to enforce' a judgment decree or order.....of His Majesty-in-Council. The words "to enforce" there are wider in meaning than the words "to execute," in Art. 182 and should be interpreted as equivalent " to give full effect to" which is synonymous with "to enforce." ———An ex parte decree was obtained on the original side on 18th March, 1912, against a firm of which one S was a partner. An application for execution was made on 21st March, 1924. S appeared through his solicitor and obtained an adjournment for moving to set aside the decree. No affidavit or any written objection as contemplated by O. 21, R. 16, was filed. On 13th June, 1922, S obtained a rule on motion calling upon the decree-holder to show cause why the decree should not be set aside. It was ordered that an issue be tried as to whether S was partner in the defendant's firm and that all further proceedings in execution of the decree should be stayed until the trial of the issue. The issue was determined against S on 29th May, 1924. An execution application was filed on 3rd September, 1926. It was contended that the order of 29th May, 1924, was by implication a determination that the decree was still capable of execution, Held, that no question of right to execute the decree was before the Court. The order was confined to the simple question whether S was a partner. LIMITATION AND CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE (AMENDMENT) ACT (XXVI of 1920).

—Applicability.

——The amendment of the Act is not meant to apply only to cases where the deaths have occurred after the 1st Jan. 1921. The result of applying the new period to all applications filed after the Act came into force is only this, that in cases of all deaths occurring within three months before the coming into force of the Act, the period would be reduced to 3 months and in those occurring between three months and 6 months before the coming into force of the Act the period would be up to the date of the Act coming into force i.e., the 1st Jan. LUNACY ACT (IV of 1912).

—S. 3 (5)—Procedure.

———Duty of Court—Inability to manage affairs should be bound—Reliance not to be placed on opinion of relations.

In assuming jurisdiction under the Lunacy Act the Court must keep in view the distinction between mere weakness of intellect and "lunacy" as understood in the Act. It is only with lunatics as defined in S. 3 (5) that the Act is concerned. It is therefore duty of the Court before proceeding further to determine judicially whether the person alleged to be incapable of managing himself or his affairs is really a "lunatic" in this sense. The finding has got very far-reaching consequences and must be given after very great care and deliberation. The elaborate procedure laid down by the legislature for conducting an enquiry into the matter must be strictly followed. The Court should not consider itself relieved of its responsibility by the mere circumstance that some or all of the relatives of the person concerned have declared that he is a lunatic. The Court ought to form its own independent judgment on the point. (Tek Chand, J.). MT. TEKA DEVI v. GOPAL DAS.

A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 289.

—Part. II—(Ss. 4 to 36)—Procedure.

———Orders by District Magistrate—Executive and judicial—Executive orders not subject to revision by High Court.

The Act deals specifically and under separate headings with two branches of proceedings executive and judicial. Any person considering himself aggrieved by an executive order passed by the Dt. Magistrate may apply under Part III for a regular inquisition conducted by a judicial Officer. The result of such inquisition is conclusive and overrides and overrules any order which may have been passed summarily by the executive authority. Under this Act the orders passed by the District Magistrate under Part II are purely executive and cannot form the subject-matter of a revision application to the High Court. —Ss. 37 and 62—Powers of District Court.

———High Court's jurisdiction excludes District Courts, through the person resides in latter's jurisdiction.

Before a District Court can institute inquisition as to a person possessed of property and alleged to be a lunatic, it must be established not merely that such person is residing within the jurisdiction of that Court but also that he is not subject to the jurisdiction of any of the High Courts mentioned in S. 37. Consequently, in a case where an alleged lunatic is subject to the jurisdiction of a High Court under S. 37, the District Court had no jurisdiction under S. 62, even though the person may reside within the local limits of the jurisdictions of the District Court, i.e., the jurisdictions of the High Court and the District Court are not concurrent, but the jurisdiction of the High Court excludes that of the District Court; on the other hand, if the alleged lunatic resides in two Districts the jurisdictions of the two Courts are concurrent and not mutually exclusive. —S. 38 (1)—Jurisdiction.

———Alleged lunatic having two residences, one in Calcutta and the other in mofussil—High Court at Calcutta has jurisdiction over him though he may have gone to the mofussil place—Nature of jurisdiction over insane persons.

Section 38 does not define the test to be applied to determine whether a person is or is not subject to the jurisdiction of the High Court for the purpose of judicial inquisition as to lunacy. But the proceedings are directed primarily against the person and only secondarily against his property. The right of the Court to learn judicially whether a person is or is not of unsound mind is inferred from the right to his care and custody provided he is insane. Such authority over the person may unless otherwise directed by statute, be ordinarily exercised in the case of residents within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court. It may also be exercised over non-residents, if there is statutory provision to that effect.

One may have two places of residence, in one of which he resides during one portion of the year, in the other during the remaining portion; what may be said to be the place of personal residence during one portion of the year thus becomes the place of legal residence during the reminder of the year and vice versa. In such a case the term "reside" may be applied to either place.

Residence should be interpreted to import in such a case not intelligent residence but bodily presence. (Case-law fully discussed.) (Mookerjee, A.C.J., Fletcher and Richardson, JJ.).[1] ANILABALA CHOUDHURANI v. DHIRENDRA NATH. 65 I.C. 57=48 Cal. 577=25 C.W.N. 178=A.I.R. 1921 Cal. 309.

—S. 62—Procedure.

———Inquisition—Ordering of by Court—Evidence at inquisition—Nature of—Orders after inquisition.

The first thing which has to be done upon an application for directing an inquisition under R. 62 is that the Judge either with notice to the lunatic or without notice should carefully consider whether the case is one which calls for an order directing an inquisition. If he considers that it calls for an order directing an inquisition then it is his obvious duty to record an order directing an inquisition. When he has once done that, he is then, by the combined operation of S. 62 with Ss. 40, 41 and 42 of the Act, to take certain steps with regard to notice.

It is only a preliminary investigation which is required to justify an order directing an inquisition. Then, an order having been duly made directing an inquisition, the date having arrived and proper notices having been given, the inquisition itself proceeds. Without an order directing an inquisition the inquisition itself is without jurisdiction.

The evidence taken at the inquisition is evidence to be given by people in the ordinary way coming as witnesses before the Court. When that inquisition terminates it terminates in a judgment which finds or does not find that the person is of unsound mind, and upon that finding the jurisdiction arises to give orders as to the custody of the lunatic and to the management of the estate. ———Lunatic served with notice—Subsequent proceedings may be ex parte.

Once service has been effected on the alleged lunatic in the manner provided by S. 40, subsequent proceedings may be ex parte and the attendance of the alleged lunatic is not a condition precedent to the disposal of inquisition proceedings under the Act. It is not therefore open to a District Court to reject an application made under Ss. 62 and 63 of the Lunacy Act merely on the ground that there is no trace of the alleged lunatic. (*Kincaid, J. —S. 71—Court's duty.

———Inquisition—When Court can order—Benefit of the lunatic is the paramount consideration.

Where an application is made to ascertain whether certain persons are of unsound mind by an inquisition, the Judge should form his independent Judgment upon the point. After examining the parties it may reject the petition in limine if it thinks that no prima facie case for enquiry is disclosed. Or it may after examining the pleadings of the parties or as a result of its own personal interview with the alleged lunatic come to the conclusion that there are grounds for supposing that the mental condition is such as to bring him within the Lunacy Act. In that case it must order an "inquisition" and proceed in the manner prescribed. After the inquisition has been completed, it must record a judicial finding on points mentioned in S. 65 (a) on the materials before it. It is only when these findings have been arrived at as a result of the inquisition that the jurisdiction of the Court to proceed further with the case arises. In determining these questions the paramount consideration is the benefit of the lunatic. A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 636, Rel. on. (Tek Chand, J.). MT. TEKA DEVI v. GOPAL DAS. 122 I.C. 570=31 P.L.R. 98=

An application was made to the District Judge alleging that the unsoundness of mind of the lunatic had ceased and praying that enquiry be made whether he is still of unsound mind and incapable of managing himself and his affairs, and that on the material placed before the District Judge there was very good reason to believe that the unsoundness of the lunatic had ceased,

Held, it was the duty of the Judge to have proceeded with the application without regard to the effect of enquiry on the matter in other proceedings pending in the Court. It would be most unfair to keep the lunatic's property under management or his person under guardianship if it could be established that he was no longer of unsound mind. (Jai Lal, J.).
